Allies Slaughter Nazis Wading Flood in Drive On Dunkerque; Rhone Valley Raided Again; General Mobilization Under Way, Rome Says

Army of 750,000, 11,000 Warplanes To Defend U. S. Urged by Lodge

Disposal to the Allies of hundreds of older planes owned by the United States military service was indorsed in influential circles yesterday, as a long-range defense program, calling for an Army of 750,000 men and 11,000 planes, was offered.

Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, of the House Military Committee, declared last night that he favored disposing of the planes to be replaced in this country's extensive defense program, planes that are serviceable, though not of the latest type, and could be made available quickly.

May went farther and suggested that plants which Henry Ford has said could produce 1,000 planes a day be turned into aircraft production at once, with Government assistance if necessary, thereby providing additional potential aid for the Allied airmen.

As plans for early adjournment of Congress were cast aside, Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, proposed the new defense program which would include a large mechanized Army "able to make a major effort immediately" in case of need.

The suggestions came in a day of intensified discussion of defense problems, as Congress prepared to give further stimulus today to various parts of the President's program.

Billion Tax Bill Likely

The Nation's thoughts of preparedness were reflected in these other activities:

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, declared President Roosevelt's call for additional military expenditures made it almost mandatory that the next tax bill produce a billion dollars a year, while Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said revision of the whole tax structure was essential.

Representative May said that if the Army wishes it he will introduce today legislation according to the President's request for authority to mobilize the National Guard and reserves, the most contentious of the President's proposals growing out of the war's progress in Europe.

The Federal Works Agency announced it was ready to turn to "rapid-fire construction" of defense works, with a force of about 2,000,000 employes.

Chairman Dies, of the Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, said its investigation of "Trojan horse" invasion would be extended to include the whole hemisphere.

Plane Deal Urged

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, was said to have placed before President Roosevelt a plan by which the Army and Navy could turn back some of their older warplanes to manufacturers, who would then sell them directly to the Allies. The Associated Press said the Army and Navy could thus receive credit to apply on the cost of new models being produced. It reported some of the President's advisers contended that if the planes would be of value to the Allies they would be of value to this country in case of an emergency during the year or so required to replace them.

Senator Austin, of Vermont, the assistant Republican leader in the Senate, was quoted as

Both Sides Gather Strength For Next Move, Watch Italy

WITH GERMANY'S 23-DAY BLITZKRIEG across the Netherlands, Belgium and northern France ended except for two tiny islands of Allied resistance along the Channel coast of France, both sides are resting on their arms in preparation for the next phase of the war.

FRENCH AND GERMANS alike told of heavy fighting along the tiny strip of seacoast around Dunkerque, the Allies' Flanders evacuation port. The French reported heavy losses to German infantry trying to wade through the muck and water almost surrounding the port, but the Germans, claiming large-scale sinkings of Allied warships and transports, predicted early success.

MAJOR FIGHTING IN THE NORTH seemed over, however, with four-fifths of Britain's expeditionary force and "tens of thousands" of French Poilus evacuated, according to British War Secretary Eden. Next blow seemed likely to be directed at France's Somme-Oise-Aisne line, where operations yesterday, however, were comparatively light.

IN THE AIR, Britain claimed smashing new victories for her Royal Air Force protecting the Allied evacuation, while German bombers ranged again over France's southeastern Rhone Valley, clear to the Mediterranean.

ITALY'S LATEST THREAT to the Allies is the announcement by Foreign Minister Ciano's journalistic mouthpiece that "general mobilization" is under way. Troop movements were reported throughout Italy; the Allies were reported strengthening their naval concentration at Alexandria.

Workers End 3-Day Strike In Shipyard

Vote to Return to Jobs Rather Than Tie Up Warship Construction

By the Associated Press

Kearny, N. J., June 2.—Striking employes of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. voted today to return to work at midnight and thus end a three-day walkout that had tied up construction work on six United States warships.

John Green, president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (C. I. O.), said the strikers, totaling about 8,000, took the action "to avoid charges of obstructing the National defense program."

He said the strikers agreed at a mass meeting to go back under an agreement reached by union negotiators and company representatives but later turned down by the union. The strike occurred Thursday midnight.

The first shift of 600 workers returns to work at midnight tonight, Green said, with the main body going back tomorrow morning. The picket line was withdrawn this afternoon.

"We believe the company should meet the union committee and negotiate the points in dispute in the light of present-day conditions," Green added.

Held up by the sudden walkout at the huge yards was construction of two cruisers, four destroyers, three cargo vessels, and two tankers.

The strike prompted Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Mich-

Cultists Jailed For Refusing To Salute Flag

Another Texas Town Arrests 90 Pacifists Vending Literature

By the Associated Press

Waxahachie, Tex., June 2.—Ninety members of a religious sect were jailed today by sheriff's deputies after attempting to distribute literature described as of a pacifist nature.

Sheriff Joe Roy said his office was swamped with phone calls after a group, estimated at 200, appeared with phonograph records and literature urging allegiance to no man-made form of government.

Several fist fights were reported. Hundreds of citizens blocked streets and milled around the jail as officers brought the prisoners in.

Members of the organization have been escorted from Del Rio, Brownwood, San Antonio and Harlingen in previous encounters of a similar nature.

Meanwhile, at Odessa, Tex., 50 members of the sect who were rescued from an angry crowd after they refused to salute the American flag, were escorted out of town by officers today.

The sect members were held in jail overnight. No formal charges were filed against any of them. County Attorney O. E. Gerron previously said the men would not be released until all saluted the flag.

A sudden thunderstorm yesterday enabled officers to rescue more than 70 members of the group from an incensed crowd which objected to religious pamphlets they were dis-

Real Father's Day Gift

Sure, Your Dad's the Best, But Tell Us About Him

There are no box tops to cut out, no stamps to inclose. Letters may be typewritten in ink, pencil or grapejuice. There is no length-of-residence minimum.

It's as simple as that, this search which The Post is conducting for "the typical father" of Washington and suburbs. All the Father's Day editor wants, in his quest of a typical American dad, is a brief description of the candidate and, of course, his name and address.

This is a sample:

"I believe my dad, John Blank, fills the bill in your 'typical father' hunt. Even though all four of us children are grown up, father is as indispensable to the household as he ever was.

"At the age of 65 he still works every day and has never shirked his duties as the family provider. He enjoys his easy chair, slippers and newspaper of an evening, but he'll gladly move down to the corner movie if my kid sister wants the living room for a sorority party.

"When he teases, it's always in fun. He sent three of us through college, always keeps an even temper and has a delightful habit of bringing mother flowers or candy or some thingumbob for the house two or three times a week. Can you beat my dad?"

Anyone from 6-year-olds to octogenarians may send in their nominations, as long as the candidate is now living in Washington or vicinity.

The letters may be of any length. Address them to the Father's Day editor, The Washington Post. None will be returned. June 12 is the deadline for their receipt, but don't wait until the last minute to pin a publishable posey on your nominee. He does not necessarily have to be your own father, but may be a friend or more distant relative of yours—just so he's a father.

Italy Expected To Enter Within Fortnight; British Prepare to Leave

By the Associated Press

Rome, June 2.—The authoritative Fascist editor, Giovanni Ansaldo, disclosed today that Italy is carrying out general mobilization in preparation for Italy's entrance into the war, generally expected any day.

"Mobilization is under way," declared Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's newspaper, Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, in his weekly broadcast to Italian troops.

He explained, however, that it was being conducted by individual summons rather than by the alarming general call of former times.

Ansaldo indicated Italy's reason for entering the war was to make her weight felt as a nation whose people could not tolerate a position of inferiority as well as gaining a share of the spoils from the British and French empires.

British Prepare to Leave

Political circles assumed that Premier Mussolini told President Roosevelt as much in a recent exchange of messages between them.

Whether Mr. Roosevelt has raised the possibility of unfavorable American reaction to an Italian war move was not known. But this was considered possible in the light of new statements volunteered by authoritative Fascists Friday that threats were not likely to influence Mussolini.

[Sir Percy Loraine, British ambassador to Rome, and his embassy staff were preparing tonight to leave the Italian capital and return to England, International News Service asserted.

[Their preparations for departure were considered in Rome political circles as an indication that Italy's entry into the European war was imminent.]

Reservists Get Cards

In any event, the impression that Italy would be in the war within a fortnight if not sooner was intensified after the exchange of messages.

Ansaldo explained that the Italian mobilization is "calmer and more moderate" than in the past.

For several weeks, reservists have been receiving pink cards calling

Reich Bombers Strike in Waves, Attack Vital Rail Lifeline

By the United Press

Paris, June 2.—Three waves of Nazi bombers today swept down the Rhone Valley to the Mediterranean in more bombing attacks which an official French statement called Adolf Hitler's attempt to speed up Italy's entrance into the war.

The German bombers, following up attacks which killed and wounded about 70 persons in Lyons and Marseille Saturday, again dropped bombs around the vital railroad and industrial center of Lyons.

These railroad lines would be vital to the Allied military movements if Italy should enter the war.

Bombers Brought Down

French antiaircraft guns were said to have brought down several of the German bombers over the Rhone today and tonight's war office communique said that Saturday's attacks, cost the German air force 12 planes.

In retaliation, Allied planes "successfully" bombed German war industries in the Ruhr and Germany's new airfields in northern France, it was claimed.

Like yesterday's raiders, today's entered France from the Swiss frontier, came down the Rhone Valley to Lyon and turned sharply left to the Mediterranean near Marseilles.

Airdromes were attacked but most of the German bombs were said to have fallen on empty hangars because the French planes had been removed to emergency fields.

Guns Heard Off Britain

London, June 2 (AP).—The sound of rapid machine-gun fire off the southeast coast of England, followed by heavy antiaircraft shooting, was heard late tonight following the dropping of bombs in Norfolk County, northeast of London.

Swiss Drop Nazi Bomber

Bern, June 2 (AP).—Swiss fighting planes shot down another German bomber today—the third in 24 hours.

The aerial violation of Swiss territory was coincident with massed German bombing raids from the Rhine airfields against the rich industrial region of the Rhone Valley in France.

Fall From Horse Fatal to District Phone Operator

Miss Helen Rawlings, 24, of 1225 Jefferson street northwest, was killed yesterday at Woodlane Farms, Layhill, Md., when she was thrown from a horse into a roadside rockpile.

Frank Wilson, proprietor of the farm, said Miss Rawlings was cantering across a field when the horse turned sharply into a road. The mount, he said, was "very quiet and gentle."

Miss Rawlings, a telephone operator with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., rode rather frequently, friends said. In the party with her yesterday were Wilson, Charles M. Frazier, jr., of Forest Glen, Md.; Calvert Brockdorff, of Takoma Park, Md.; Cecil Umstead, of Kensington, Md., and Miss Edith Hale, of Kensington.

Surviving are her mother, Mrs. Julia A. Rawlings, and two brothers, Herbert L. and John S. Rawlings, all of Washington.

Northumberland, Wealthy Duke, Killed in Action

London, June 2 (AP).—The Duke of Northumberland, 27, the ninth to hold a dukedom created in 1766, was killed in action, it was announced today.

The Duke, known a year ago as the largest single owner of coal properties in England, created a stir when he temporarily quit his 200-room castle for a 20-room house near by because of heavy taxes and declining royalties.

King George Fires New Machine Gun; Gets Bull's-Eyes

London, June 2 (AP).—King George tried out a Bren machinegun today and got 60 shots in or close to the bulls-eye at 200 yeards.

While a score of army officers, munitions officials and newspaper men watched, the Monarch blazed happily away.

"I had no idea it was so steady," he said

The King spent two hours touring a gun factory where he saw the first rifles brought back from Flanders for repair. They were rusty from sea water and the wooden stocks were streaked white with salt from the hazardous channel crossing of the great retreat.

Sympathy Present, Symptoms Absent And So Was Wallet

Dr. Harry A. Garfield, 77, of 1529 New Hampshire avenue northwest, yesterday paid $20 or so for a lot of sympathy he didn't want.

On his usual Sunday morning stroll Dr. Garfield, who is the son of the twentieth President and former head of Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., was accosted by two women and a man in an automobile. After passing the time of day, the conversation drifted into matters of health and one of the women passed her hands over the doctor's chest and back in search of symptoms.

When the trio finally departed, Dr. Garfield told police, he discovered his wallet with $15 to $20 was gone. He said the sympathetic woman was a blonde, about 25, and the man was swarthy and had a black mustache.

Nazis' Air Margin Cut to 12 Per Cent, London Reports

London, June 2.—With the thunder of big guns across the Channel echoing over the south coast towns tonight, War Secretary Anthony Eden told the people of this country and empire in a broadcast that four-fifths of the British Expeditionary Force has been rescued, and that the primary aim of the enemy, to destroy the Allied armies in the north, had been thwarted.

Even as he spoke train loads of weary bedraggled, wounded but uncowed troops, fresh from battle around Dunkerque were rolling inland from ports where others are still being debarked.

At all the stations through which they passed crowds gathered to cheer the returning soldiers, toss in cigarettes and fruit through the windows, and at little village stations field kitchens were working endlessly preparing hot soup and stew for the almost famished men, who, as Eden said, have been attacking and retreating almost ceaselessly for most of the past three weeks.

Seamen who assisted in rescuing them came ashore and flopped down on docks and pavements from exhaustion. They slept where they dropped.

The air ministry announced tonight that in a series of furious air

Roosevelt, Manhattan At Sea With 3,000; Belligerents Warned

By the Associated Press

The United States notified all of Europe's warring nations last night that the liner President Roosevelt had sailed from Galway, Ireland, with Americans fleeing from the conflict.

This step was taken to avoid any possibility that the plainly marked ship might be mistaken for a belligerent vessel and fired upon.

No notice of the sailing of another American liner, the Manhattan, from Genoa, Italy, was sent to the belligerents because its route was not through the officially defined combat area.

More than 2,500 Americans sailed on the two liners, the State Department was informed by the United States Lines. (News cables, however, showed a total of nearly 3,000 aboard the two ships.)

Galway, Ireland, June 2 (AP).—The liner President Roosevelt left this west coast Irish town at 8:20 p. m. (2:20 p. m., E. S. T.) today with 800 American repatriates after having been forced to stay in the outer harbor since early yesterday morning

Rearguard Holds Only Narrow Strip At Sea, Berlin Says

By Percival Knauth

Berlin, June 2.—Nieuport, Adinkerke and Ghyvelde are claimed to have been captured by German troops pressing forward against the doggedly fighting British rear guard covering the final stages of the evacuation from Flanders.

The narrow strip of coastline still held by the British thereby has been reduced to less than 5 kilometers in depth at its most eastern points, but Dunkerque itself is still apparently firmly in British hands with the nearest German troops at Adinkerke, 10 kilometers away.

The toll of transport vessels and warships taken by yesterday's German attacks has mounted as successive waves of German bombers, slicing through the clouds, strove to inflict final telling blows on the departing enemy. Today's communique of the German high command reports 11 troopships and 4 warships, totaling 54,000 tons sunk, with 14 warships and 38 merchant vessels, or 160,000 tons of shipping badly damaged.

Another troopship, a heavily laden 4,000-tonner, reportedly was tor-

Mission from 'Hell'

Flanders Survivor Sent to U. S. As Special French Attache

By The United Press

Paris, June 2.—A survivor of the "Flanders hell" is en route to Washington to inform President Roosevelt regarding Allied war operations, it was revealed tonight as Premier Reynaud broadcast to the American people his thanks for their humanitarian aid.

Capt. Count Rene de Chambrun, evacuated by sea from the Flanders pocket of encirclement, is en route by clipper to the United States as new assistant military attache to the French Embassy in Washington.

An honorary American citizen because of his direct descent from Lafayette, and son of the late Clara Longworth, of Cincinnati, Ohio, Count de Chambrun is charged with the special mission of acquainting American officials with military operations.

The count left Paris Saturday night for Lisbon to board the American Clipper for New York.

His mission, it was revealed, was entrusted to him by Premier Reynaud and Allied Generalissimo Maxime Weygand who today made a secret inspection of the Allied front along the Somme.

Returning to Paris shortly before his broadcast to the United States, the premier and war minister said he was "exertmely well satisfied" with the strength of the main French defenses along the Somme.

In his radio broadcast to the American people Reynaud said that relief organizations, including the American Red Cross and French war aid groups, will be set up in every French town under the name of "Succour Americain Pour Vic-

Water, Guns Stop 200,000 Germans; Dead, Wounded Alike Engulfed

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Paris, June 2.—Waves of German infantrymen wallowing waist-deep in Dunkerque's protecting floodwaters launched a supreme effort today to wrest that channel port from the Allies—their last foothold in Flanders—but latest reports said the Nazis were mowed down or beaten back.

French military circles estimated Germany had thrown 15 divisions—or around 200,000 men—into the assault on Dunkerque.

Allied shelling, machine-gun and rifle fire and the strafing of low-flying planes were blended into a defensive holocaust to meet the Nazi drive, although the city was under German fire from field guns almost ringing the town.

Bombardment Constant

The German guns were said to be pouring out a ceaseless bombardment to cover the infantry movements and blast the British and French from their fiercely held point of debarkation from Flanders.

Merciless combat developed as the Nazi soldiers, no longer shielded by tanks, plunged into the flood from opened coastal canals.

Wave after wave of German troops strove to cross the water hazard, it was said, and each showed great gaps as the individual attacks ended. The survivors stumbled back to the high ground and the dead and wounded disappeared in the few feet of water.

Bursting shells geysered the water, churning it into a muddy and bloody froth.

The sea, let in around Dunkerque to form a great protecting moat, almost encircled the city.

Beaches extending for several miles on either side of Dunkerque were helpful in the embarkation of Allied troops, permitting a spreading out of the retiring forces.

100 Warships Aid Allies

More than 100 Allied warships took part in the operations and more than 200 transport vessels ranging from large steamships to little more than launches came and went under intense fire and bombing, ferrying troops across the channel to England.

Twenty-five miles down the coast from Dunkerque at Calais a little British garrison, cut off for a week and making a last stand in the thick-walled seventeenth century citadel, was reported beating off German attacks virtually engulfing that channel port.

Outnumbered and provisioned by parachutes, the garrison signaled last night it was still holding out. The British had taken refuge in the citadel after being forced back through Calais, step by step in heavy fighting.

The citadel was built by Vauban as part of the fortifications system started in northern France in 1678. Its thick walls have proved solid ramparts against German tanks, it is said, and its deep, turf-covered galleries are safe shelters from bombs.

While the no-quarter contest for Dunquerque raged on in what the French call a "reciprocal strategical pause" in the war, the fighting eased

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

NO PEACE IN OUR TIME

In its sluggish way the Capital is awakening to the realization that in our time there will be no real peace again.

Harlan Miller

Men and women now in their twenties and thirties probably will never know a day or a night wholly free from nightmares of war threats, armament shortage, blockade, surprise attack, bombardment, invasion, jeopardy to life and freedom.

* * * *

This will become a routine part of our lives. Whether Hitler wins a crushing victory or only a partial triumph; even if the Allies should by a miracle stave off defeat, or win the most decisive issue now possible, the rest of this red century must play out its tune of defense and attack. The isolationists should be happy beneath their umbrellas, for we may even get real isolation, whether we get war or not.

* * * *

If that's the way it is—and the pessimists who have been so right the last decade don't even think the point debatable—we must all face as indomitably as we can the sort of life our ancestors faced on the Indian frontier, a rifle near at hand—but in the grand manner, on a titanic modern scale. Perhaps not war, but armed peace always.

* * * *

It means, of course, universal compulsory military training, sooner or later. It means cadet regiments in all the high schools and colleges. It means 500,000 new soldiers in training every 6 or 12 months; it means several million young men at weeks of maneuvers every year. A militarized CCC is only a beginning.

"—airports go underground"

It means underground airports and hangars in the sides of hills, with tall gates from which planes can emerge roaring through the air, with no wheel touching a bombarded runway.

It means subterranean airplane factories and munitions factories, invulnerable to any air attack.

* * * *

No one doubts that the country which built an invincible military machine in five years can build an invincible navy in two. No one doubts that the regime which created an air force of 20,000 planes can if it wishes build 5,000 bombers with a 6,000-mile cruising range in a year or so.

* * * *

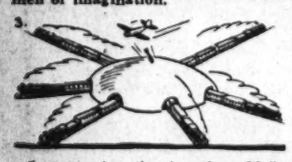
So it means here a land with 100,000 good pilots; as many airplane pilots as there are taxi drivers. If Hitler wins it means that strategic railroad junctions and highway junctions must be sheltered and fortified, immune from attack and disruption, at least all the new ones built in the future.

* * * *

It means that no vital structure of the future, no power plant or pumping station or communications center in a strategically exposed position, can wisely be built above ground if it is possible to build it underground. It is wiser to realize this now than after it is bombed. All this, of course, is truer for Europe than for us; but it will be all too true for us.

* * * *

It means, too, that our defense planners must explore the realms of the fantastic. They must think of new mystery weapons and forestall them; they must imagine amphibian flying tanks and nonsinkable warships, perhaps with self-sealing rubber lining, and armored helicopters and overhead antiaircraft steel ceilings for artillery crews. Defense must be planned by men of imagination.



"—every junction is vulnerable"

It means that me must think not only of a Canada fighting side by side with us for defense, as Belgium with France, but also of a Canada which surrenders, as did Belgium. It means that we must envision a Mexico harboring perhaps more effective planes and tanks than we have available. And if 5,000 parachutists are possible, why not 100,000?

* * * *

This total permanent new state of war means that instead of merely coasts and frontiers to defend, there is now a potential front to defend every few miles from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to Mexico. In the new warfare every cow pasture, every gravel road is on the front.

* * * *

It means that every legation and embassy of an aggressor nation, or of the smaller nations which are their tools and dupes, must be treated as an enemy outpost. It means that every soft American who is an apologist for a chronic aggressor is either a fool or a rogue.

* * * *

No eventuality can be poohpoohed, no precaution is too preposterous, during the decades when the have-not nations are on the march and try to take over the world. This is not hysteria; it is hysterical to close our eyes.

* * * *

With open eyes Americans can prepare for the future blithely and confidently, and if we prepare rapidly enough we may not have to fight.

It is a pity the piping times of peace are gone for our lifetime. They were so pleasant, even the last 20 years, while they lasted.

U. S. Will Aid N. Y. in 'Model' Probe Of Trade Practices in Milk Market

LaGuardia, Arnold Will Cooperate In Investigation

Saying it hopes the inquiry would become a "model for similar undertakings elsewhere," the Justice Department announced yesterday that it was joining with New York City in an investigation of alleged restraints of trade in the metropolitan milk market.

Cooperating in the inquiry will be Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York and Thurman Arnold, chief of the department's antitrust division

The announcement said such an investigation was "particularly important at the present time when the European war may well result in skyrocketing food prices in this country."

Complaints have been received, the department said, that there was "monopolistic control" of the shipment of milk interstate into the New York metropolitan area. The inquiry will extend into New York State, Connecticut and other areas comprising the metropolitan milk shed, the department said.

Complaints Cited

The announcement said the specific complaints were:

"Collusive action by the major milk companies to maintain an artificial distinction between Grade A and Grade B classes of milk in order to exact unreasonable prices from the consumer.

"Maintenance through combination of artificial prices for milk sold to consumers.

"Combination to coerce retail distributors of milk in various ways."

An "effective attack on such restraints,' the department said, required an organization with jurisdiction to investigate beyond city limits, composed of both municipal and Federal officials. The antitrust law was the most effective instrument to protect consumers, the department added, saying also that the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Madison oil case had made the law a "more powerful weapon."

The department observed that "a comprehensive prosecution of restraints of trade in Chicago milk was followed by a drop of 4 cents a quart in store delivery without loss to the farmer.'

Calls Probe Waste of Time

New York, June 2 (AP).—Thomas H. McInnerney, president of the National Dairy Products Corporation, declared today that there was "no monopoly in milk" and that a projected Federal-city inquiry meant that the Government would be "frittering away both its time and ours."

The New York metropolitan milk marketing situation has been a highly contentious problem for years—so much so that a few years ago Federal-State regulation finally was resorted to.

A principal issue has always been the large "spread" between the price paid by consumers—as high as 20 cents a quart—and the amount returned to the producers, the farmers—as low as 4 cents.

This differential has caused almost continual complaints from upstate farmers and has led to several bloody strikes in which farmers refused to sell their milk and dumped tons of it on the highways during battles in which many a head was split.

The milk distributors—the Borden Co. and Sheffield Farms have the bulk of the business—have consistently maintained that their profit margin was narrow, almost to the vanishing point, and that the "spread" in prices was due to the amount of dairy products which went into things like cheese and ice cream on which the return is a lot less than 20 cents a quart.

Panama Elects Dr. Arnulfo Arias As President

Panama, Panama, June 2 (AP).—Dr. Arnulfo Arias, government candidate and the only remaining entry, was elected President of Panama by a record vote today in what official reports indicated was a quiet election.

Unofficial figures at 8 p. m. placed the presidential vote at 85,000, and indicated Dr. Arias may receive 100,000 votes by the time all are counted.

The province of Colon cast 12,000 votes for the Government Party, out of 15,000 registered voters, indicating Dr. Richardo Alfaro's last-minute withdrawal had not affected the result. Alfaro had urged his supporters to refrain from voting on the ground it was impossible for an opposition party to exercise its right of suffrage.

ARMORY BEGUN—Representatives of the Army and Congress joined in breaking ground yesterday for the District National Guard Armory. Four shovels of dirt thrown into the air yesterday symbolized the beginning of what is promised to be the most complete and efficient armory in the United States.

A crowd estimated at 500, standing and sitting beneath a burning sun in a shadeless field at the end of East Capitol street, watched the ceremony, which marked the start of work on a vast building to house the District's 1,900 National Guardsmen.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard; Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana; Representative Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner of the District, stood poised on four new shovels as the 260th Coast Artillery Band played "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

The command from Gen. Cox sent the shovels into the ground. A brief pause for photographs, and four shovels of dirt went into the air.

The 121st Engineers Band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" as uniformed participants stood at salute before the colors and civilians bared their heads at attention.

A steam shovel stood by to finish the work begun by the four ground breakers. A number of other Army and governmental notables were guests of honor at the ceremonies, which were brief

Gen. Cox, in a short talk, presented his fellow shovelers as "three men who stand out" in the 75-year-long effort to obtain adequate quarters for District guardsmen. Senator Overton is chairman of the Senate District Committee and Representative Collins was chairman of the House Appropriations Committee when the appropriation for the armory was made.

The guard commander also introduced officers of units which will occupy the building and Charles H. Tompkins, president of the construction firm in charge of the initial work.

Completed in Year

Gen. Cox told reporters after the ceremony that the $2,750,000 building would be completed early next summer. The 250 by 300-foot drill hall, first of a number of units, will be completed in three months, he said.

The entire structure, ranging from three to six stories high, will face north, on a plaza extending from East Capitol street. Covering approximately seven acres, it will provide space for activities of all District guard units as well as storage for mobile guns and other equipment. The exterior will be of limestone.

The only other building in the District erected as an armory was constructed in 1861, used three months and converted into a hospital for soldiers wounded in the Civil War.

"Since then," said Gen. Cox, "the National Guard units have been kicking around from one building to another, whatever they could find."

23 Governors, Meeting Today, To Discuss Defense Problems

State Executives to Map Correlation Of Efforts Under Preparedness Plan; G. O. P. Keynoter Stassen to Open Parley

By the United Press

Duluth, Minn., June 2.—Problems of national defense will confront 23 Governors tomorrow when they open the thirty-second annual National Governors' Conference.

Gov. Lloyd Stark of Missouri, said he would take up with the Governors the question of the part States should play in the defense program. He conferred with President Roosevelt in Washington last week.

Defense talks among the chief executives probably would center on aids to industries if placed on a war-time production basis: The need of improved highway systems to facilitate cross-country movement of troops, and improved airport facilities.

Gov. and Mrs. Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota, gave a reception and buffet supper tonight to the visiting Governors. Stassen, who will keynote the G. O. P. National Convention at Philadelphia June 15, will deliver an address of welcome to which Gov. Henry H. Blood, of Utah, will respond.

Govs. James H. Price of Virginia, Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, and John W. Bricker of Ohio also will speak. Govs. Charles E. Sprague of Oregon, Herbert O'Conor of Maryland, and E. D. Rivers of Georgia, will speak on various phases of the relief problem.

Duluth's welcome to the Governors will be made at a banquet at which C. F. Kiscomb, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, and Stassen will speak. Republican Gov. William H. Vanderbilt of Rhode Island and Democratic Gov. Homer A. Holt of West Virginia will be the after-dinner speakers.

Discussions will be dispensed with Tuesday while the Governors travel on special trains through the famed iron range and the Arrowhead resort section of Minnesota.

The conference will continue through Wednesday.

5 of 1938 Annapolis Class Wed as 2-Year Ban Expires

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., June 2.—Five 1938 Naval Academy graduates didn't wait a minute after their two-year marriage ban expired today to take unto themselves wives at ceremonies witnessed by June week visitors in the beautiful Academy Chapel.

They were the first members of the Academy class of 1938 to marry in the chapel. Navy Department ruling prohibits Academy graduates from marrying within two years after their graduation.

Chaplain William N. Thomas, who officiated at four of the ceremonies, reported that 19 more chapel weddings will be held this June.

The weddings today follow:

Ensign William G. Blasdel, U. S. N., to Miss Janice M. Frankenberger, daughter of Commander Hugo Frankenberger, U. S. N. (retired), Washington. Midshipman Norbert Frankenberger, of this year's graduating class, brother of the bride, was best man. Miss Irene Blasdel, the groom's sister, was maid of honor.

Ensign Andrew D. Jackson, jr., U. S. N., of the U. S. S. St. Louis, to Miss Betty N. Polyanski, Crownsville, Md. Joseph G. Greenfield was best man and Miss Bertha Dawson, maid of honor.

Ensign Robert D. Cox, jr., U. S. N., to Miss Katheryn E. Garnett, Norfolk, Va. Robert P. MacCready was best man and Ellen G. MacCready, matron of honor.

Lieut. Cyril E. Emrich, U. S. M. C., Casey, Ill., to Miss Mary D. Bryant, Baltimore. Lieut. John A. Saxton, U. S. M. C., of Frederick, Md., was best man and Mrs. Joseph G. Miller, Baltimore, matron of honor.

Ensign David M. Inbrusch, U. S. N., of the U. S. S. Texas, to Miss Lydia M. Margarrowski, Baltimore. Lieut. Theodore Trenholme, U. S. N., was best man, and Miss Jane Urian, maid of honor.

Immediately after each of the last two weddings, Lieut. and Mrs. Emrich and Ensign and Mrs. Inbrusch passed through an arch of swords held by the bridegrooms' classmates.

The Rev. Thomas J. Fallen, C. S. S. R., officiated at the last wedding. The other ceremonies were performed by Chaplain Thomas.

Communists Name Browder For President

Clamorous Convention Opposes U. S. Defense, Asks a 30-Hour Week

By the Associated Press

New York, June 2.—Earl Russell Browder, the Wichita, Kans., boy who grew up to become America's No. 1 link with Soviet Russia, was clamorously nominated for President of the United States today at the Communist Party's convention in Madison Square Garden.

Browder, leader of the party, is free on bail on appeal from a four-year prison sentence for using a fraudulent passport.

He was the party's candidate in 1936 and polled 80,000 votes.

Nominated for Vice President was James W. Ford, Alabama Negro.

The proceedings were broadcast over two national radio networks, NBC and Mutual, in the face of an unsuccessful eleventh-hour effort by former Representative John J. O'Connor, New York Democrat, to have the Government ban the broadcast, and other opposition.

Many Stations Ban Program

Network member stations in a dozen large cities, including Philadelphia, Cincinnati, New Orleans, Milwaukee, Indianapolis and Wichita, announced they were not carrying the program, and the Catholic War Veterans, Inc., urged a national "listeners' boycott" on the ground that the affair was un-American.

O'Connor's contention was that the Communists were not a bona fide political party. The Federal Communications Commission said it had no authority to stop the broadcast.

Accepting the nomination, Browder said:

"The masses of the United States cry out for a new party, for a modern Abraham Lincoln, as the only road toward the solution of the crisis of today, the crisis of the breakdown of capitalism, the crisis of imperialist war that threatens destruction to the world.

"I pledge our party to cooperate with labor and the people toward this great goal."

Condemn Defense Plans

The convention had adopted a platform opposing President Roosevelt's national defense program and calling for support of "the peace policy of the Soviet Union."

Other planks were a 30-hour week, a 1,000,000-homes-a-year Federal housing program for low-income groups and expansion of the WPA to 3,000,000 workers at union wages.

Mexico Dickering To Settle With 2d U. S. Oil Firm

Mexico City, June 2 (AP).—Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador to the United States, tonight confirmed reports that negotiations are in progress with another American petroleum company for settlement for oil properties expropriated in 1938.

He refused to name the company, but well-informed oil circles said it was the Cities Service Corporation.

Cities Service's two Mexican subsidiaries produced about 3,300 barrels daily of the 140,000 total output at the time of expropriation. An indemnification of about $3,000,000 is being discussed, it was reported.

A settlement recently was made by Mexico with the Sinclair interests for $8,500,000.

Hindsight and Foresight

By HOLGAR J. JOHNSON

President, Institute of Life Insurance

YOU'VE probably heard a lot about the service a life insurance agent should give his clients. Exactly what is that service and why is it so indispensable to you?

Well, in the first place, the agent should be an expert in life insurance. He can guide you in putting your money into the right kind of insurance—right for you. Good agents today are planning people's life insurance carefully—fitting it to the needs of each individual client.

No two persons' needs are exactly alike and, in each case, insurance must be carefully fitted. In this way the conscientious agent can help you get maximum protection—and the right kind.

But his service doesn't end once you've taken out a policy. Time brings changes in your affairs . . . death of beneficiaries, changes in your income, in the size of your family. All these eventualities the agent must watch for and check with you periodically. In short, he must see that your life insurance stays fitted!

Unfortunately this space isn't large enough for me to mention the many other ways a good agent can help you get the most for your money, but I shall explain some of them specifically in later columns.

HERE'S A POINT on which I think most of us will agree if we don't hide from the truth. Again and again widows have told me, "Frankly, Mr. Johnson, my husband would never have taken out that insurance if his agent hadn't shown him how vitally necessary it was! He'd have put it off!"

I guess there'd be thousands of families left without support each year if the agents let us put off the insurance duties we mean to assume "some time."

NOTE: In this regular Monday column, paid for at advertising rates, the Institute of Life Insurance has asked its president to discuss questions of interest to life insurance policyholders. Inquiries may be addressed to 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

Confederate Veterans, at Arlington Rites, Hear Leader and Sen. Hill Assail Hitlerism

Graves of Boys in Gray Decorated in Memorial Day Ceremonies

The fading remnants of the once hard-hitting Confederate Army took its stand, inferentially, at least, against Hitlerism yesterday.

Gen. Julius Franklin Howell, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, speaking briefly in the Arlington Amphitheater after flowers were strewn on the Confederate graves at Arlington Cemetery in Memorial Day exercises, said:

"Today we are confronted with a brutal effort to destroy all liberty, to reduce the world to a condition of civilized savergy, if such a term is possible. We are now one great Nation standing for the right. May God bless our people with steady nerves and spiritual inclination."

Dreams Shattered

After him, Senator Lister Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, called for sacrifice and preparedness. "No longer do we live in a world of pleasant dreams. The clank of the tanks and the wail of the sirens have shattered our dreams.

"The love of peace does not give any guarantee of its possession. Respect for the rights of others does not guarantee that others will respect our rights. The only guarantee of our security is in the might of our strong right hands," Hill told the audience of about 500.

In "that right" he said he had confidence. "We in America have the capacity to match strength with strength and invention against invention. The material resources are at hand. The spiritual resources are abundant in the great soul of the American people. The peril is great, but the power to meet it is far greater," he said.

Rejects Superman Theory

"I for one do not attribute to the Germans of today the qualities of supermen," he said.

He touched on American developments in the art of war. "The blitzkrieg of today is the cavalry of J. E. B. Stuart and Nathan Bedford Forrest mounted upon the mechanical horses of this modern age," he asserted.

American Legion posts paraded flags at the ceremonies. The United States Marine Band played.

Swedes Down Two German Airplanes Opposite Narvik

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, June 2.—It was officially announced tonight that a Swedish neutrality guard shot down two German planes which flew over Swedish territory, presumed to be opposite Narvik.

One of the German planes crashed and was destroyed, but the crew saved itself with parachutes. They, as well as the crew of the other plane, totaling two officers and seven men, were interned.

One German officer and two noncommissioned officers in another German plane which landed in Norway, but whose crew lost its way and crossed into Sweden, were also interned.

New fighting which could be heard across the Swedish border broke out in Mo when British warships forced passage of Ranafjord and attacked the Germans in Mo city. The result of the battle is still unknown, but if the Allied forces were successful, they would isolate the German forces north of Mo in the neighborhood of Bodo.

Collegians Favor Helping Allies

Most American college students want the Allies to win the war, favor the United States giving them economic aid to that end but want this country to keep its man-power out of the conflict, according to a poll taken by the College Republicans of America and made public yesterday by the Republican national committee.

College Republicans of America is an organization of more than 100 clubs in as many colleges.

Of the students queried, according to John Colmar, executive secretary of the organization, 80 per cent hoped for an Allied victory, 61 per cent favored economic aid to the Allies and only 15 per cent desired American entrance into the war.

The former Gretchen Wilson, she married Donahue in January after divorcing John Hearst, son of Publisher William Randolph Hearst.

D.C.-Chicago Air Time Is Reduced

One-stop, faster air service from Washington to Chicago will be inaugurated Wednesday, it was announced yesterday by D. Walter Swan, District Traffic Manager for United Air Lines.

The service, it was said, will reduce the elapsed time from here to Chicago to four hours and 15 minutes. A new flight, under the expanded one-stop service, will leave Washington at 3:15 p. m. and arrive in Chicago at 7:30 p. m., Chicago time, Swan stated.

Similar one-stop, faster service also is being inaugurated by Pennsylvania-Central and United from Chicago to Washington at the same time, Swan said.

Serve Truth, Midshipmen Urged at Baccalaureate

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., June 2.—The 456 members of the Naval Academy graduating class attending baccalaureate services in the academy chapel today were urged by Chaplain William N. Thomas to lead lives devoted to truth, service and worship.

Soft light filtered through memorial windows dedicated to Adm. Farragut and other naval heroes as Chaplain Thomas—using as his text "for me to live is Christ"—preached from a flag-bedecked chancel.

The blue and gold uniformed midshipmen, attending their last chapel service before graduation Thursday, sat in the center of the recently remodeled chapel, surrounded by sweethearts, relatives and friends.

"The test of a man's philosophy of life," Chaplain Thomas said, "is what he does in a crisis . . . what do you consider necessary that you may really live? That is always an important question. It is particularly pertinent to the plans of men who are setting their courses for life.

"Figuratively speaking, you have spent the last four years going down a long corridor towards a door that opens into a world where men are testing by practical application their theories of what it means to live.

". . . Now that these doors are swinging open, your teachers, parents and others could wish you a far happier and saner world than that into which you are about to go. But the fact remains that it is what it is this morning because human beings have made it so and if it is to be any better tomorrow it will be because you and your generation are not satisfied with living as it is directed in the present environment.

". . . the heart of the world is crushed over the destructions of war . . . but there are still intangible treasures that will survive as long as man survives. No change of material possessions can rob a man of what he carries in his own soul.

". . . The light of truth is the first indispensable in any adequate answer to the question: For what shall I live?

". . . The second high standard for life . . . is to serve. All the traditions of your alma mater and of the service of which it is so great a part, emphasize the value of this ideal. They have given to the Navy the coveted name, 'the naval service.'

"The glory of that service is indelibly written in every colorful page of the history of the American Navy. Like a golden thread it runs through the tapestry of naval tradition from the days of John Paul Jones to this hour . . . It is not the size of a man's hat or waistband or shoes that makes him great but the difference he makes in the sum total of human welfare.

". . . Worship is the recognition of something greater than ourselves . . . may you find a place in your life for that divine good that completes the painful partiality of mortal men . . .

"For you to live may it mean a quest for truth, a desire to serve and a loyalty to the best. May life be long, happy and useful and may God's blessing be with you all the way."

The service was concluded with the midshipmen singing the hymn that closes every chapel service—"Eternal Father! Strong to save . . . O hear us when we cry to thee, for those in peril on the sea."

Three Faiths Join in Drive To Make Jobs

Clergymen Will Meet Here Tomorrow To Map Campaign

Religion's concern with reemployment will be emphasized by Protestant, Catholic and Jewish leaders at a three-day interfaith conference on unemployment opening tomorrow in the department auditorium.

In a statement regarding the parley, James Myers, its executive secretary and industrial secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, said the problem of unemployment in America is one which must be faced honestly and squarely.

"Economic desperation leads multitudes of well-meaning citizens into temptation. Baffled, confused, embittered, seeing themselves in want in an age of potential plenty, not knowing where to turn, they are an easy prey for demagogues and would-be dictators.

"It is in such a psychology of despair that class bitterness increases, 'scapegoats' are blamed for all the trouble, and race hatreds flourished, civil liberties are curtailed or destroyed, labor's rights of organization are imperiled and the ground is prepared for violent social revolutions and dictatorship, either from the right or from the left."

In a call signed by the Right Rev. Msgr. John A. Ryan, Catholic Social Welfare Conference; Rabbi Edward L. Israel, chairman of the Social Justice Commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, and Dr. Myers, the conference has outlined the following purposes:

1. To emphasize the ethical issues and moral consequences of unemployment and its influence on American life.

2. To impress upon members of religious bodies, employers, labor, farmers and consumers, and on all political parties their inescapable responsibility for dealing with the problem of unemployment.

3. To study various specific, proposed remedies and to refer such proposals for further study and action by the various religious bodies. These findings will be the responsibility of the conference itself rather than of the convening organizations.

Senate Bloc Plans 'Draft Capital' Drive

Forced Loan System To Be Put as Rider On Defense Tax Bill

A concerted effort will be made in the Senate to "tax the profits out of war" and "draft capital for defense" by a system of forced loans according to ability to lend, The Post learned last night.

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, author of the profits-tax bill, said that Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, would attempt to attach the proposal to the present defense tax bill when that measure reaches the Senate Finance Committee. He termed it "the most drastic piece of tax legislation ever suggested."

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said the first move toward the forced loan system will be an amendment to the defense tax bill eliminating the tax exemption on new Government bonds he will introduce on the floor of the Senate.

Selling the $3,000,000,000 defense bond issue now contemplated by the Treasury will be impossible by voluntary subscription if the tax exemption is removed, Lee said.

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, a member of the Finance Committee, told The Post yesterday that he would support Lee's amendment.

Bone's measure, calling for stiffly graduated levies on personal and corporate incomes in time of war, was introduced jointly by 50 Senators and four Representatives in March of last year, but was not reported out by the Finance Committee.

Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, told The Post yesterday that he has "always believed in the general principle" of taxing war profits. "If we are going to have a bill this session, he said, I believe something ought to be done about it."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, one of the original supporters of Bone's measure, said that enactment of the war profits tax would "have a decided effect on the thinking of the American people" and make intervention in the European war far less likely.

Last night Bone and Lee advocated their respective proposals in a radio broadcast. With Brown and Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, they took part in the American Forum of the Air conducted by Theodore Granik and broadcast over the Mutual network.

C. I. O. Board May Discuss Labor Peace

Parley Here to Weigh Problems Brought Up By Defense Program

By William H. Lawrence
United Press Staff Writer

The split in organized labor and problems growing out of the Administration's preparedness program last night appeared likely to dominate deliberations of the executive board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations which convenes here today.

Attention centered on prospective peace moves by Sidney Hillman, 53-year-old head of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, vice president of the C. I. O. and chosen by President Roosevelt as the labor member of the new Defense Coordinating Council. Illness probably will keep him away from the initial sessions, but he is expected to attend or be represented before they are concluded.

Associates doubted that Hillman has a new labor peace plan to propose. It was considered likely, however, that he will directly or through a representative declare that the defense emergency has lent increased force to rank-and-file demands that conversations looking toward an armistice be resumed with the American Federation of Labor.

A. F. L. Waits on C. I. O.

The A. F. L. is waiting for the C. I. O. to initiate the new peace talks. Harry C. Bates, chairman of the A. F. L. committee named to negotiate a truce, said his group is ready to meet at any time. He contends that a united labor movement is essential now, not only to expedite the defense program, but to safeguard social gains made under the New Deal.

Definite steps in this direction, of course, will be influenced by C. I. O. President John L. Lewis. He and Hillman have not seen eye to eye on past peace proposals nor do they agree on the question of a third term for the President—an issue which may or may not come before the board.

Lewis said last October, when the first meeting of the board was held in San Francisco, Calif., that if Mr. Roosevelt ran again he would be "ignominiously defeated." Later he hinted that he might attempt to weld progressive farmers, labor, the colored and the Nation's youth, into a third party if Democrats failed to nominate a Presidential candidate satisfactory to the common man.

First Lady Urges Unity

New York, June 2 (INS).—Unity must return before labor can attain its full strength, and, likewise, national unity is necessary for the United States to meet the problems facing America, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today told members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union at the World's Fair.

"Democracy means that we have respect for the individual and it also means that each and every individual carries a greater responsibility than under any other form of government," the First Lady said.

"You cannot trust your responsibility as an individual to anybody else.

"In a trade union, each member, while he may have his own preferences and the freedom to say and do as he likes, must, in the interest of the union, discipline himself to achieve results for all of their members. That is so in the labor movement as a whole.

"You have to learn unselfishness and respect for the individual—that is so in a democracy. You have to learn respect in the individual, but you have to learn also that each individual must have self-discipline and unselfishness in the interest of the whole group."

Text of Anthony Eden's Address on Escape Of Beleaguered B. E. F. From Flanders

'The Bravest Epic In All Our Annals,' Minister Declares

By the Associated Press

New York, June 2.—Following is the text of War Minister Anthony Eden's address as transcribed here by N. B. C.:

In the battle of the ports which has been raging during the past three weeks, Germany has made great strategic gains. The loss to us in equipment and in material has been heavy, but there is now another side to this picture. The bulk of the British Expeditionary Force has been saved, and quite apart from what the French have done for their own forces, we have been able to bring tens of thousands of our French Allies off with us from Dunkerque.

Nor is this effort ended. Four days ago, not one of use would have dared to hope that the isolated Allied armies could have fought their way through the bottleneck to the coast.

These men have marched hundreds of miles. They have fought countless actions with an enemy that hemmed them in and pressed upon them from three sides.

The German high command proudly announced that they were surrounded. They have fought their way through. How have they achieved the seemingly impossible? Man for man, the British troops have proved themselves superior to the Germans whenever they have met them. All accounts show that the British Expeditionary Force took a toll of the enemy greatly in excess of that suffered by themselves. On at least two occasions, at Arras and on the Ypres Canal, the losses suffered by the German army were enormous.

So it is that at the last the German plans were foiled, and that despite the surrender of the Belgian army, our own troops and the French Allies with them have fought their way through.

Let me now state the sequence of events. At the call of the King of the Belgians, the B. E. F. advanced into Belgium, and took up its positions on the River Dyle. The advance lasted several days. Through events they could not control, our army had to come back in less than half that time. It did so with little confusion, and with few losses. Seventy-five miles forward, a fight at the end of the advance, and 75 miles back, fighting all the way, all in the space of ten days.

Like Men at Drill

That was the first phase of the battle of the ports, and it was brilliantly executed. I have a report of one division which had not lost a single straggler on that 150-mile march, and here is a quotation from an account of an eye witness of our troops on the front:

"No display of drill at Olympia would be smarter than the work of men of our forces that I saw. The feeling of confidence was magnificent."

And so the British Expeditionary Force found itself back on the shore, with its strength in men and material almost intact, but meanwhile, the German mechanized columns were pouring through the gap to the south, advancing across our lines of communication, biting ever deeper into our back areas.

Desperate efforts were made to stem the tide. Units which had been sent to France to supply some of the much-needed labor behind the lines were thrown into the fight and acquitted themselves splendidly. Others were sent to hold the Channel ports in an effort to keep open communications for the B. E. F.

Some troops marched 35 miles in 24 hours. British brigades on the flanks stood firm, despite enormously extended frontage they had to defend. At one time the expeditionary force of nine divisions was holding a front of 80 miles. They held on, and they fought back.

On the west, British troops defended the narrowing gap to the sea. Day after day the battle continued, and at the end of it they had fought themselves to a standstill, but they held their ground, and by doing so they enabled the remainder of the expeditionary force to get clear.

On the east, corps artillery coming into action against the enemy massing for attack inflicted such heavy casualties that the attack never developed.

No Braver Epic

The stories of individual exploits at this time are legion. An antitank gunner, who knocked out seven tanks; a subaltern who after knocking out hostile tanks swam a canal to bring back marked maps and other booty. But the triumph is not the triumph of individuals, however gallant; it is the triumph of an army.

There is no braver epic in all our annals.

There, then is the story of the Battle of the Ports. From the moment of the collapse of the Belgian army, there was only one course left to the Allied armies, to hold the line around Dunkerque, the only port that remained, and to embark as many men as possible before their rear guards were overwhelmed.

Thanks to the magnificent and untiring cooperation of the Allied navies and air forces, we have been able to embark and save more than four-fifths of that British Expeditionary Force which the Germans claimed to have surrounded. The armies' debt to the Royal Navy, to the Merchant Navy and to the Royal Air Force can never be forgotten.

We have been compelled to destroy much valuable material. We have suffered casualties. Once again our ally has to bear the invasion of the sacred soil of France. But the Germans, in spite of the huge losses which we know them to have suffered, have failed in their main object, to surround and annihilate the Allied armies in the north.

B. E. F. Still in Being

The British Expeditionary Force still exists, not as a handful of refugees, but as a body of seasoned veterans. We have had great losses in equipment, but our men have gained immeasurably in experience of warfare and in self-confidence.

The vital weapon of any army is its spirit. Ours has been tried and tempered in the furnace. It has not been found wanting. It is this refusal to accept defeat that is the guarantee of final victory.

Our duty in this country is plain. We must make good our losses and we must win this war. To do that, we must profit by the lessons of this battle. Brave hearts alone cannot stand up against steel. We need more planes, more tanks, more guns.

The people of this country must work as never before. We must show the same qualities, the same discipline and the same self-sacrifice at home as the British Expeditionary Force have shown in the field.

The nation honors with proud reverence those who fell that their comrades might win through. The innumerable actions, the countless deeds of valor of the last week cannot all be recorded now. Each will have its place in history—soldiers, sailors, airmen who gave their lives to help. Theirs is an immortal memory. Their spirit must be our banner, their sacrifice, our spur.

No passenger list was available, but United States Lines officials said at least 812 passengers were on board.

2,200 on Manhattan

Genoa, June 2, (AP).—The United States Liner Manhattan sailed today for New York, with almost 2,200 passengers aboard, nearly three times the ship's normal capacity.

The sailing was delayed a day because of the crush of applicants for accommodations.

Steamship agents said at least 1,000 persons hoping to embark on the Manhattan were left behind.

Two smaller American liners, the President Harrison and the Excambion, due to sail tomorrow or Tuesday, were booked to capacity.

The United States Liner Washington is due at Bordeaux, France, Tuesday.

United States Lines officials, however, were not sure whether the Washington would call at Genoa after leaving the French port. They assumed that a decision would depend on whether Italy entered the war by that time.

Third class passengers, more than two-thirds of those on board, stood in line from early morning for the formalities of embarkation. Although precedence was given to Americans, they were forced to battle through crowds of unhappy refugess from northern and central Europe who resignedly awaited their turn.

British Say Nazi Air Margin Has Been Cut to 12 Per Cent, 2,102 Planes Lost battles over Dunkerque and the English Channel during the past 36 hours, British Hurricane and Spitfire fighters shot down or put out of action 121 German planes.

[The German communique claims that 58 Allied airplanes were destroyed yesterday—42 in air battle (40 of these over Dunkerque), while 8 were brought down by antiaircraft artillery and 8 were destroyed on the ground. German losses in the air were placed at 15 machines.]

The British claim, which included destruction of 78 German planes Saturday—"a new day's record"—brings to 2,102 the number of Nazi aircraft the British say they have destroyed since the invasion of the Low Countries 23 days ago.

In these battles high above the French and British troops on the Dunkerque sand dunes or leaving the shore in a motley armada of barges, motor launches and one-lunged ferryboats, the British admitted losing 24 planes, which brings their losses in the past three weeks to about 500.

Air Margin Cut

What this means to the relative strength of the two air forces is not being told, but one report from a usually reliable source maintains that the German losses have cut down their numerical superiority to about 12 per cent. This source now puts the respective totals at about 9,900 first-line planes for the Germans and 8,700 for the Allies.

[The United Press quoted French officials as estimating Germany's air losses at more than one-third of her first-line planes. These authorities claimed Nazi losses have been triple the German production rate and professed to expect numerical equality in the next two months.]

There is, of course, no way of checking these estimates.

The story of the week-end battles in the air is the same old tale, of a handful of British machines against far larger forces of German bombers, escorted by fighters.

In one battle alone, the air ministry says, three American-made Hudson bombers took on 40 German planes. The Hudsons, nipping at the fringe of this large formation, shot down three and put two others out of action before breaking off the fight.

Food Output Speeded

London, June 2 (AP).—To plug holes bored in the nation's food supply by Germany's occupation of Denmark and Holland, Minister of Agriculture Robert S. Hudson today broadcast a plan to increase the production of every one of Britain's 300,000 farms, cultivate derelict land, raise wages and prices for farm products and stem drift of labor from the farms to other industries.

Hudson appealed for 5,000 more women workers for the farms. He disclosed that 70,000 workers had left the fields since the war began last September.

The agricultural reorganization envisages the drafting of thousands of conscientious objectors for farm work and the release of 40,000 agricultural workers now on municipal road projects.

Thousands of men and children were on the move today—British and French soldiers reaching England from what they described as the "hell" of Flanders and 48,000 London children leaving the eastern and southern coastal areas for "safer" regions in Wales and central England.

It was the second trek to safety for the children, who were sent from London when the war began.

British factories worked day and night throughout the week-end, forging weapons of defense against invasion and to reequip the army withdrawn from Flanders.

The public has been warned that sentries are ready to shoot anyone approaching key points. Despite that, two men were wounded, one fatally, in Essex when they failed to answer a challenge.

The war office disclosed that the army needs more youths from 18 to 19½ years old for "very important duties" in the home defense. These, at the same time, would be trained for army service which they begin at the age of 20.

Governor Fight Features Primary In Iowa Today

Des Moines, June 2 (U.P.).—A contest between a Republican Governor who campaigned on an "economy record" and a radio news commentator will feature tomorrow's Iowa primaries.

Gov. George A. Wilson, making a bid for a second term, was opposed by H. R. Gross, a political newcomer, who conducted his campaign entirely by radio.

On the Democratic side, State Senator Ed Breen, Fort Dodge, seeks the Gubernatorial nomination over John Valentine, Centerville, former United States attorney.

There was no contest for United States Senator.

Four of Iowa's incumbent representatives in Congress were unopposed for renomination. They are Thomas E. Martin, Iowa City; Henry O. Talle, Decorah; Karl M. Le Compte, Corydon, and Ben F. Jensen, Exira.

Representative John W. Gwynne (Republican), Waterloo, was opposed by Mayor Ralph B. Slippy, Waterloo, who has the backing of Townsend Plan supporters.

Representative Robert K. Goodwin (Republican), of Redfield, elected in March to fill the unexpired term of the late Cassius C. Dowell, was not a candidate. His post was sought by five Republicans, while only one Democrat was in the race.

Both of Iowa's Democratic Representatives in Congress faced primary opposition. George W. Koob, Dubuque, opposed Representative William S. Jacobsen, Clinton. In the Ninth District, Representative Vincent Harrington, Sioux City, was opposed by State Senator Lester S. Gillette, Fostoria.

Belgian Ministers Say King Leopold Scorned Their Urgent Advice to Flee

Parliament Defers Ousting Of Monarch

Unable to Obtain Quorum of Nation's Fugitive Legislators

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, June 2.—Absence of a quorum Friday prevented the Belgian Parliament from formally deposing King Leopold III, the minister of state, Count H. Carton de Wiart, revealed today.

He explained the decision would be taken at the temporary capital in Limoges, France, as soon as both chambers were able to meet regularly.

A full report of Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak's dramatic account given at the Limoges meeting of the events preceding the Belgian capitulation was made available today.

Urged King to Flee

In the course of a conversation with King Leopold when Brussels was still the capital, Premier Pierlot, argued that in case the Belgian army should have to surrender, the King should try to escape and not fall into the hands of the enemy, Spaak said.

King Leopold asked, "What is Queen Wilhelmina doing?"

"The Dutch Queen is in London," Pierlot replied, "to continue the war."

"Do you think she is right?" King Leopold retorted.

On May 17 the Belgian government left Brussels for Ostend. Pierlot wrote King Leopold that the Belgian forces were not to separate from the Allied armies and that the King should not risk being taken prisoner. Separation from the Allies would render impossible the future reconstruction of Belgium, Pierlot is said to have declared.

The question was discussed again at the King's headquarters by Pierlot, Spaak and Lieut. Gen. Henri Denis, defense minister. The ministers used all means of persuasion—beseeched the King, menaced him, using the strongest language, Spaak related.

"I understand the gravity of the moment"—King Leopold finally declared. The ministers saw a ray of hope but next day King Leopold hesitated again.

War Over, He Believed

He considered the war over and believed his duty was to stay in the country. The ministers answer was that he could only make peace as a free King and not a prisoner, Leopold still hesitated.

Two days before capitulation, the ministers tried to reach the King's headquarters and en route had a narrow escape within six kilometers of the enemy positions. They found Leopold in a chateau at Wynendael, near Thourout. He received them with tears in his eyes.

Pierlot declared, "It is time to leave. I shall stay with you up to the last minute on the condition that you go with me."

Leopold answered, "I will stay with my army in my country. You remain with me to govern."

"Do you think Hitler will permit it!" Pierlot exclaimed.

"No. But you will be able to stay with me as a private counsellor."

"I Am No Dictator"

"But there will be formed a government in France."

"It will be against me. I wish to have ministers. I am no dictator."

"In this case we leave. We cannot remain with you," the ministers announced.

On Sunday night Leopold telephoned to London for a blank signature on two royal decrees. All 13 ministers present refused their signature.

On Monday, Leopold offered the Germans the capitulation of his armies.

Leopold's Cousin Describes Loss Of Belgian Planes

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, June 2.—Prince Xavier of Bourbon-Parma, brother of Empress Zita and cousin of Leopold of Belgium, has arrived in Paris via Dunkerque after serving with the artillery of the Fifth Belgian Army Corps in Flanders.

He explains the Belgians were compelled to "fight blind" because all their air force was put out of action at dawn on May 10.

"Swarms of German planes suddenly appeared over the Belgian air fields," he said. "Each was violently bombed. All the planes were destroyed, all the hangars were set ablaze, all the runways were wrecked. Three or four hours after the beginning of the attack not a single Belgian plane remained intact."

Prince Xavier said the capitulation was announced two days after King Leopold had issued an order calling on every man to do his duty to the end so as to keep Belgium intact.

When the news of the surrender was made known "many of the officers and men wept like children. Gen. de Krahe and his entire division refused to lay down their arms and rejoined the French. Judging by the oaths I heard them make, all Belgian officers and men who can do so will escape to France to continue the struggle."

them up individually, the authorities thus obviating the necessity of posting a general mobilization proclamation.

With this system, Ansaldo declared, "ever stronger contingents" are reaching concentration points while additional reserves still are unmobilized—"although they very well may find their summons on their return home from work."

Many thought that the day might be next Tuesday, June 4, when the cabinet meets.

However, the newspaper Il Resto del Carlino said that date was excluded.

If the precedent of the Ethiopian war is followed, neither the cabinet nor the superior body, the Fascist grand council, necessarily would meet before Italy goes into action.

At that time, the only official action was Premier Mussolini's announcement from the balcony of the Palazzo Venezia that the war had begun.

Ansaldo demanded to know "how a people like ours, with all our energy, could remain outside a great contest like the present one, in which all the great peoples of Europe are participating.

"If Italy should stay out of the contest," he declared, "it would signify irreparable decadence, a kind of disqualification."

Discussing political aspects of potential Italian intervention, Ansaldo named Corsica, Tunisia, Gibraltar and Suez as Italian objectives. All these, he said, "control our independence . . . these controls, these annoyances must disappear."

Liner Avoids Naples

Rome, June 2.—The only alarming development of the day was that the Conte di Savoia rushed straight for Genoa instead of stopping at Naples, where she was due at noon. A few hours later she was in Genoa after one of the fastest trips of her career.

People who went to Naples to meet the boat returned with stories of Naples being full of troops and the habor jammed with war vessels, which may be the reason the Conte di Savoia kept away. One cannot go to any railroad station, including Rome, these days without seeing hundreds of soldiers.

Curb Brutality, Pope Urges Belligerents

Calls for Honorable Treatment of Civilians In Conquered Lands

By Herbert L. Matthews

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, June 2.—A plea for the humanization of the war and for the honorable treatment of civilians in conquered territory was made by Pope Pius XII this morning in a speech to the Roman cardinals assembled to congratulate him on his saint's day.

In this first pronouncement since the Germans invaded the Lowlands, the pontiff again stressed the need for a just peace and extended his "paternal love" to the German and Allied people.

The Pope again spoke sorrowfully of his unavailing efforts to prevent the war or to bring peace and of "the sad economic, social, ideal, religious and moral effects and the hard repercussions which are resulting even beyond the oceans at the prolongation and embitterment of the conflict."

Moral Damage Greatest

"Is this, perhaps, the tremendous hour in which God weighs merits and demerits?" he asked. "Now that the present war has reached such an intensity of battle and destructive progress and its ruins have assumed gigantic proportions, the external and material damage cannot be compared to the destruction of the spiritual and moral patrimonies."

The Pope then spoke of his hopes for a better future and "a peace which should be just, honorable and lasting," and it was then that he discussed the treatment of noncombatants which, he said, "in more than one region was far from conforming to the rules of humanity.

"God is our witness and in affirming this heavy truth we are not moved by a spirit of partisanship for anyone. No people are immune from the danger of seeing some of their sons transported by passion and yielding to the demon of hate."

Love for All

"As for us, desiring to soften the consequences of the war, we extend our paternal love to all our sons and daughters, whether among the German peoples, who are always dear to us and in the midst of whom we spent long years of our life, or to those of the Allied states, to whom grateful and pious memories also bind us, as well as to the much tried and dearly beloved Polish nation and other noble peoples, to whose tragic sufferings we pray the All Highest not to delay bringing the desired comfort."

The Pope ended with a prayer that "the cruel struggle and tragic destruction of the wealth of peoples should end and amidst so many ruins and tears there should open the path toward the temple of a healthy peace, sealed not with hate and vengeance but by the mark of the noble majesty of justice."

pedoed and sunk by a German speedboat.

German bombers likewise singled out troop concentrations along the beach for attack and reported the destruction of numerous small craft used for ferrying troops to transport vessels.

Two "large merchanters" were bombed yesterday in Marseille Harbor—the first German attack on southern France. Both vessels, reportedly, were set afire. The railroad line from Marseilles to Lyon also was bombed and reported to have been broken in several places.

The British troops holding the eastern portion of the Dunkerque sector, are reported by a German war correspondent to be a South Lancashire regiment. They are described as an "elite unit of the British Expeditionary Force."

Fight Along Canal

Bitter fighting is reported along the canal parallel with the seacoast which is flanked by 30-foot sand dunes on which the British have dug in with heavy machine guns and grenade throwers. The German forces, however, are equipped with artillery. Although losses are admittedly heavy on the German side, the British are being gradually forced to give up their positions on the dunes which enabled them to cover the German advance across the lowlands, according to semi-official claims here.

German military quarters tonight reported that the British transport fleet had "disappeared" from Dunkerque. The fall of the city, they state, can therefore be expected in the nearest future, since British evacuation is "now apparently concluded." The German air force, they emphasize, will do its part in hastening the capture of this last remaining Allied stronghold on the Artois battlefield.

It is estimated here that the number of French and British soldiers drowned when troopships and warships were bombed, sunk or damaged "must equal several divisions." No hint is offered as to the total number of troops which were able to slip through the German ring at Dunkerque, but it is conceded now that French troops were among those shipped aboard troopships in the last days of fighting.

Nor have further figures on the number of prisoners taken in the Artois and Flanders sectors, yet been released. It is stated in tonight's army communique that the captured material of one army alone included 200 pieces of artillery of all calibers. Long columns of prisoners are still being herded for transit to camps, it is said, where they will be registered and counted so that their number may not be definitely established for some days yet.

No Word on Nelson

Berlin, June 2 (AP).—There was no mention in today's communique of the sinking of the 33,950-ton British battleship Nelson, one of Britain's newest and mightiest dreadnaughts, announced yesterday by an authorized spokesman at a foreign press conference.

The German press carried stories of the reported sinking under New York date line, quoting the American press.

The communique omitted also reports on activity on the main battle-front from the Channel at Abbeville along the Somme and Aisne rivers to Montmedy.

But military observers were awaiting a tremendous offensive on this line, the road to Paris.

Lodge Urges U. S. to Arm 750,000 Men

11,000 Planes Asked By Senator; Sale of Old Craft to Allies Favored

favoring the proposal if it would not weaken this country's defenses.

"We must have a lot of old planes that we can spare and that the Allies can used right away," he said. "I understand they are begging for almost any kind of fighting plane they can get now."

May said that in the Ford plane production plan the Government could assist, if help were neeeded, possibly by "paying his wage bills while he's undertaking the job."

Senator Lodge's new Army plan was said by the Bay Stater to be based on the conviction that "it is vital to have a clear understanding as to what we are to defend and how we are to defend it, if we are to spend money intelligently and make our effort count."

Sets Up Defense Area

It would provide protection for North America, Central America and the islands, waters and shores of the Caribbean as a base area essential to this country's safety.

It would make possible "one-man control of industrial mobilization instead of having it done through a committee," and would concentrate the Army in four major areas instead of the present dispersion at scattered posts.

It would prevent any non-American State from acquiring territory in the area bounded on the East by the thirtieth meridian of west longitude, and on the West by the line Alaska-Hawaii to the Southern extremity of the Western Hemisphere.

Maintenance of the National Guard as a reinforcement of the Regular Army after the first month of an emergency and its conversion into a first line force for antiaircraft defense would be brought about.

Lodge declared the personnel in peace time would be procured by voluntary enlistment, in time of war through "a selective service law."

Opposes Combat for CCC

He opposed the idea of placing the CCC in the combat service, declaring "it would be far better to have universal service for all boys of 18 for a six-month period and expose the well-to-do boys to the broadening and hardening influence of army life, rather than confine it to a single class which happened to be in moderate means financially."

There appeared to be growing discussion of possible compulsory military service for youths.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Connecticut, was quoted by the Associated Press as citing the estimated 1,500,000 youths who reach military service age each year, and suggesting that if even 50 per cent of them were physically fit they could provide an adequate training force.

He said the desirable method would be to take the 750,000 into the Army and Navy for a year of training before they begin their business or professional careers. Later they could be called back for periodic "brush-up" training.

Await Government Support

Government officials, meanwhile, were dooking to the annual Conference of Governors opening today at Duluth, Minn., for support for the rearming program. When Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, of Missouri, conferred with President Roosevelt ten days ago it was said that Mr. Roosevelt had discussed with him ways in which the governors could be helpful. In that connection, the New York Times said in a copyrighted article last night that cooperation of the States in a recruiting drive in build up the Regular Army and the National Guard would be requested.

The week also is expected to see Congress advance materially the legislation essential to the estimated $4,675,000,000 defense program.

A House appropriations subcommittee prepared to start work on budget estimates covering about $1,375,000,000 in additional extraordinary expenditures and contract authorizations for the Army and Navy, suggested last wek by the rPesident.

Vinson Bill Speeded

The Senate was expected to hurry consideration of the House-approved Vinson bill authorizing an 11 per cent expansion of the Navy's tonnage. The House was to act on a conference report on the $1,302,000,000 Navy and $1,823,000,000 Army appropriation bills.

The House Ways and Means Committee will wind up its consideration of the proposal to increase the debt limit from $45,000,000,000 to $48,000,000,000, and raise $656,000,000 of additional taxes, a proposal which numerous members of House and Senate are opposing as inadequate. They insist additional taxes should be provided.

The President, back from a weekend cruise on the Potomac, was expected to canvass the legislative situation today with the Senate and House leaders and to press forward with the organization of his industrial mobilization program.

Catholic Library Campaign Nets $1,200 in Fortnight

A Catholic public lending library and reading room will be established here next fall if a movement launched by Mrs. W. Edward Gannon, active Catholic laywoman of Washington, is successful.

A committee has been organized to raise $5,000 for the project, first of its kind in the District. The committee so far has raised $1,200 in a two-week campaign.

Through parish representatives and other groups a campaign for 3,000 books will be started soon.

Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, of Washington, already has contributed a set of his works and Msgr. Hugh Thomas Henry has donated a large collection of popular apologetics in English out of his private library.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of the Washington and Maryland Diocese, and other members of the Washington hierarchy also have given the undertaking their blessing.

'Aid the Allies' Group Plans D. C. Crusade

William Allen White, Sponsor of Movement, Asked to Speak Here

Leaders of the newly formed Washington branch of the National Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies laid tentative plans yesterday for a city-wide mass meeting to give momentum to the movement

William Allen White, Emporia, Kans., editor, has been asked to deliver the principal address, and other nationally known men will be invited to speak.

White is father of the movement, which aims to make as many planes availoble to the Allies as President Roosevelt feels the United States can safely spare, secure a Congressional appropriation of $100,000,000 to aid war refugees in the war zone and stop the export of all war materials which may find their way to the Allies' enemies.

The mass meeting plans were discussed at a session in the home of Huston Thompson, 2500 Massachusetts avenue northwest, chairman of the local committee.

Robert Woods Bliss, former United States Ambassador to Argentina, told committee leaders that Hitler has declared that the United States as well as England and France "must be smashed as world powers and Germany will rule the world." The present state of Europe, he declared, is evidence enough of the danger of taking his threats lightly.

He said this country should spare no effort short of actual declaration of war "to aid those who are now fighting our battles across the sea."

Yesterday's conferees designated various groups to work among professional, ministerial, educational, social and industrial organizations to gain support of the committee's aims.

Mrs. Morrow to Speak

Emporia, Kans., June 2 (AP).—William Allen White, chairman of the Committee for American Defense Through Aid to the Allies, said today that Mrs. Dwight Morrow, Englewood, N. J., will make a radio address under the committee's auspices Tuesday night.

Mrs. Morrow, mother of Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, will speak on the subject, "Does America Deserve a Miracle?"

The address will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Co., White said, from 11:15 to 11:30 p. m., Washington time.

Veteran Found Dead in Garage

Nathan Lubar, 52, of 1346 Park road northwest, a World War veteran, was found dead in a garage at the rear of 7405 Fourteenth street yesterday morning by a nephew, Max Jeweler, of that address.

According to Detective Sergt. Aubrey Tolson, Mr. Lubar left his home at 7:30 a. m. yesterday to get his auto, parked in the garage. His death was discovered two hours later. Tolson said that the dead man had suffered a breakdown two weeks ago and had been worried over the illness of a daughter, Gloria, 16, victim of pneumonia.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

THE PAYOFF—ABSOLUTELY! A few days ago we announced that the Hi Hat would soon have a new musical group. Oscar, of the Hi Hat, called up and said, "'Tain't so! 'Tain't so!" We printed a retraction. Two days later we went into Hi Hat . . . Friend Oscar blushed becomingly, twiddled his fingers and muttered, "Looks like you got me on the spot. We're getting a new band next week." . . . Next Monday there'll be new faces on the Hit Hat bandstand, a bunch of Manhattanese rhythm boys, we understand . . . In the meantime, you'd better get around and enjoy Ray Harris and his Diplomats, current Hi Hat aces, and we mean aces.

POSIES FOR THE "MYSTERY BAND." No less an authority than Glenn Miller's arranger, Jerry Grey, is enthusiastic about Washington's new "mystery band" (now formally chistened the Columbians). The crew includes four saxes, piano, drums, trumpet, bass guitar. Four are singers, four are arrangers, and they go in strongly for four-way harmonies. And four figure success to 'em!

THIS WEEK'S SHOWS. Shoreham. Faye and Wellington, said to do "tomorrow's dances today," will lead the show. There'll also be the three sweety-pie McNallie Sisters. Washington likes the Woolford dachshunds so much that they'll stay over.

Casino Royal. The all new "June Rose Revue," fresh from New York, will start today. Includes a line of dancing buds and a bunch of novelty acts. Dance music by Eddy Wald's band.

Lotus. The gay and glossy "Top Hat Revue" remains over in its entirety. Includes the dashing Mil-Ray Girls, Byrnes and Swanson, experts in exotic dances, nimble Sybil Roth. Songs by Buddy Shaner and dance rhythms by Bill Strickland's Dixielanders.

Jerry Junkin, Flagship's fine singer, is a graduate of singing contests, landed his first important job as a result of winning a talent contest at the Roger Smith Hotel. You've probably heard him also at the Shoreham and New Bavarian.

MAYFLOWER FASHION PLATE. For summer evening go'ns a la vogue, see Joan Whitney in the Mayflower Lounge. There's the one of gay chiffon with long, tight-fitting sleeves and necklace and belt of turquoise. And the bouffant brown net with white organza leaves all 'round the neckline. But prettiest of all is the eyelet embroidered white organdy a la "Gone With the Wind."

Gayest wedding announcements we've seen are those Gay Nineties ones sent out by Erwin Devron, of the Carlton Lounge, and his bride, the former Marian Brinkerhoff.

HOW THE POST CIRCULATES! Miami friends of Maestro Milton Davis recently sauntered into the Rainbow Room, proceeded to give him an account of his winter doings. "Hey, how'd you know?" said Milton. The reply was, "Oh, we've been reading about you in The Post all winter."

Glen Echo's two new cafes, indoor and roof garden, are perfect sports for summertime dining. You can get nice snacks there, too, after dancing to Paul Kain's orchestra in the Spanish ballroom.

MAYFAIR PICTURE. Sasha Lukas, vacationing maestro of Troika, with dancer Mara Bielinskaya . . . Publicist Bill Mullett waiting to go on the radio with Gordon Hittenmark . . . Ken Overlin, the new middleweight champion . . . Most of Maryland Gardens' girl orchestra . . . Ditto for the Jill-Ray dancers from the Lotus . . . A couple of the white uniformed hostesses of the Pennay Central Airlines.

Prize tunes of Washington songwriters played on Tuesday "Composer's Nights" at the Neptune Room are also likely to be given pleasant prominence over Washington radio stations. It's a great opportunity.

STARLIGHT, STARBRIGHT! That's the new Starlight Roof atop the Roger Smith Hotel that's just got away to a beautiful start. The Arthur Herbert orchestra plays with a softened sweet swing that makes the stars seem closer. Bert Stevens at the piano plays like a combination of Eddy Duchin and Alec Templeton. Yes, the Starlight Roof is a bit of all right.

Remember our old pran', Don Dickerman, of the Pirates' Den? If you go to the Trans-Lux this week you'll see the opening of Capt. Don's new Hollywood Pirates' Den. The scene is lo—, uh, teeming with celebs.

ENTHUSIASM, INC. Rhythm lovers are chanting endless compliments to Reggie Childs' orchestra, now holding forth in Wardman's Metronome Room. Monsieur Childs seems to have everything-plus to please the dancers. You'll especially enjoy Singer Lucille Doran plus the Three C's. P. S. Next on the Metronome "Band Parade" in a few weeks will be Little Jack Little.

The Lounge Riviera continues as the pet spot for sophisticates, social register and otherwise. The air-cooling and soft summer lighting are perfect. Pete Macias' feats in rhythm are on the stupendous side. So are the beverages.

CRUISE NEWS. If you have that longing to go on a boat, just try O'Donnell's Sea Grill. You have to pass over running water to get to the Captain's Cabin and outside the portholes you can see the whitecaps running convincingly . . . Or you can get that seagoing sensation in the Anchor Room, where the interior is a perfect duplicate of a battle wagon's downstairs.

Hep! One of the stars of Woolford's Dachshunds now on the Shoreham Terrace

Wonder whatever became of....?

Did his classmates lose track of him? How could they? He was the sort of friend that all of us would want to keep... mostly because of his understanding slant on life and people and things. He was active in athletics, yet his studies never suffered... nor did overwork cheat him of recreation and relaxation. Lighthearted, yet serious when problems faced him... always master of his worries. He avoided idlers, but added constantly to his circle of sincere friends. He was courageous without being reckless, confident without being cocksure... moderate in all things. Everybody said he'd make good.... He has.

If you, too, like everything in moderation, you'll like Budweiser, the Beverage of Moderation. You can count upon it anytime to be a pleasant companion and, when you entertain, Budweiser is a perfect host.

Many laboratory tests have proved that the disc provides a perfect seal and prevents air and cork particles from entering the beer. General Assails Flaws Shown in U. S. Army At Maneuvers; Urges More and Bigger Guns

Gen. H. J. Brees Frankly Cites Faults War Games Revealed

By the Associated Press

Camp Beauregard, La., June 2.—Annual Army maneuvers on an even larger scale than those in which 70,000 troops took part in this section recently are recommended in the report of Maj. Gen. H. J. Brees.

Commanding general of the Eighth Corps Area and chief control officer of the maneuvers here, Gen. Brees discussed in frank language deficiencies shown by the maneuvers, and recommended changes.

Aside from calling for annual training on a grand scale, he said he was convinced that "the 105mm. howitzer should be substituted for the 75 mm. gun in our infantry division. The experience of these maneuvers also indicated that the number of antiaircraft units in our type corps should be increased if we are confronted with an enemy strong in the air.

Motor Forces Rapped

Pointing out other weak links in the present land defense, Gen. Brees said road reconnaissance by motor columns was noticeably poor.

Motor columns barged ahead regardless of security, road conditions or terrain," he said.

"All too frequently it was noted that all the basic principles of security on the march and halt were not only ignored, but flagrantly violated. In case after case flank protection on the march was noticeably nil."

Another part of his report said the lack of support by heavy weapons, including artillery, "was painfully evident in all actions. If these weapons are not needed we are wasting money in purchasing them and in training in their use.

Lack of Liaison

"There was a decided lack of liaison. Units had no knowledge of who or what was on their flanks nor made any effort to find out. There were not a few cases where elements of the same and adjoining units fired on each other.

"Many demolitions (of bridges) were made without judgment and severely handicapped subsequent operations of the unit making the demolition.

"For many years we have been stressing in our training the measures for defense to be taken by ground troops against low flying aircraft. These teachings seem to have been forgotten almost entirely. Infantry in trucks is helpless. To subject them to an air attack unnecessarily would be sheer murder."

The maneuvers here represented the greatest peacetime concentration of combat forces in history of the United States.

Latin America Speeds Drive On 5th Column

Many Arrests Made; Danish, Norse Aliens Under Nazi Pressure

Bogota, Colombia, June 2.—Nazis in Colombia are becoming bolder daily, and despite revelations of the press, the German charge d'affaires blandly tells reporters that there is no German fifth column in Colombia or any other part of the world. He added that Adolf Hitler has said that he has no territorial interest in the Americas and that the Germans are prohibited from spreading National Socialist propaganda in foreign countries.

Panama Reports Terror

Copyright by New York Times

Panama, June 2.—The Nazis are attempting a campaign of terror and blackmail in the countries of Latin America with large German populations, according to reports received here from reliable sources. They also are extending the persecution heretofore inflicted on Jewish refugees, to Dutch, Norwegians, Danes and nationals of other Nazi-occupied countries.

A recent arrival here states that the Nazis in Argentina, Chile, Brazil, and to a certain extent, Peru, are secretly demanding tribute in cash or part of the wages of Dutch, Belgian, Danish and Norwegian residents. If they refuse, it is reported, they are threatened with severe punishment, and in some cases, death to their families in the Nazi-occupied territories of Europe.

The Nazis also are allegedly attempting to control Norwegian and Danish ships in Latin-American ports. The master of a Norwegian ship recently arrived from South America said a German came aboard his ship in a Peruvian port and proceeded to give him orders. He replied by throwing the German off the ship.

Nazis in Colombia, it is said, have prevented the showing of motion pictures to which they objected and in one case beat a newspaperman because they objected to the stories he had written.

Arrests in Argentina

By the United Press

Latin-American countries, aroused by fears of fifth column activities within their borders, continued unabatedly Sunday their drive against subversive elements.

Numerous arrests were reported and in Argentina the Buenos Aires newspaper, La Prensa, said it had learned unofficially that on Monday or Tuesday President Roberto M. Ortiz would send to Congress an emergency measure outlawing all activity "which is directed against public tranquility or compromises the country as it regards the belligerent countries."

Uruguay police remained silent regarding the current investigation of espionage and sabotage but it was learned that police raids had netted pamphlets, maps and documents designating the country as the "Uruguayan District of the National Socialist Party."

It was learned that an official of a "neighboring country" pointedly told a Uruguyan authority that his country was the center for dissemination of Nazi propaganda throughout South America.

In Bogota, Colombia, an investigation into fifth column activities was spurred by the arrest of six persons and seizure of quantities of propaganda.

igan, to offer a bill in Congress requiring workers on defense essentials to sign inviolable "no strike" contracts for the duration of their employment. Secretary of the Navy Edison said "we cannot have trouble of this sort in these times."

Plans Appeal to Washington

Under terms of the agreement reached May 29 by union negotiators and company officials the workers receive a 2½ to 4-cent-an-hour increase over previous scales of 62 cents to $1 an hour. Strike demands include a 10-cent an hour raise, vacations of one week after one year and two after three; a union preferential shop, and seniority clauses.

A joint statement by union officials said the return to work would be pending negotiations with the company to settle the four points at issue. A committee was selected by the union to go to Washington and "lay before the appropriate Government agencies the men's demands for further adjustment of the new agreement."

A majority of 5 to 1 approved ending the strike.

The entire group was marched to the courthouse for a midnight lecture on Americanism by G. Ward Moody, Odessa American Legion commander, and County Judge A. H. Dennison.

At Auburn, Calif., an unidentified group of men and women who attempted to distribute literature from what they called a "religious" organization was hustled into automobiles by a group of irate citizens last night and told to get out of town and stay out.

Copies of the offending pamphlets were torn up and scattered in the streets by unidentified persons, who said they were of a "subversive" nature.

Court May Rule Today

The constitutionality of a flag-salute requirement may be decided by the Supreme Court today, in a case involving members of a religious group similar to those involved in the Odessa, Tex., incident.

A regulation of the Minersville, Pa., school board that children must salute the flag in class was attacked on behalf of Lillian Gobitis, 12, and her brother, William, 10, on the ground that it infringed religious freedom.

It was contended for the children that saluting a flag constituted "idolatry" and that they would be "destroyed" if they did so but the school board expelled them for their refusal.

The Federal district and circuit courts sustained the challenge. The committee on the Bill of Rights of the American Bar Association and the American Civil Liberties Union filed briefs with the Supreme Court in support of the children.

Red Cross Will School 30 Instructors In Art of Making Bandages for War Use

Hoping to speed up production of surgical dressings for Europe's wounded soldiers and civilians, 30 women volunteers from all sections of the country will come to Washington this week for a four-day course of instruction under the American Red Cross.

On completion of the course, to be held tomorrow through Friday at Friendship, the home of Mrs Edward Beale McLean at 3600 Wisconsin avenue northwest, the volunteers will return to their respective communities to conduct similar classes at Red Cross chapters.

The District Red Cross Chapter reported yesterday that a week-end surge in contributions to the war relief fund brought Washington's total donations to date to $85,056.42.

Principal motivator of the spurt, which brought in $12,197.76 Saturday, was a donation by an unnamed contributor, the largest anonymous contribution yet received. A check for $1,000 from the Andrew Mellon Foundation and one from Mrs. Elizabeth P. Patterson for $2,000 were other large Saturday donations.

The Catholic Daughters of America, District of Columbia Court No. 212, presented a donation of $100.

The bandage-making class here will be instructed by Miss Mary Swiggard, of the national headquarters staff. Volunteers from the District Red Cross Chapter will demonstrate the technique of making dressings.

Talks before the class will be made by James T. Nicholson, assistant to the chairman of the American Red Cross; Miss Mabel T. Boardman, national director of volunteer service, and Miss Mary Beard, national director of nursing service.

Mrs. McLean has donated the use of a large glassed-in porch at Friendship for the class.

The Nation-wide instruction program to result from the course at Friendship is expected to increase sharply the production of surgical dressings to meet heavier demands in Europe's stricken areas. Nearly 3,000,000 dressings have been manufactured by 350,000 women volunteers since last September.

Meanwhile, the American Red Cross announced the creation of a "super-relief organization" in France to distribute Red Cross supplies. Called "Secours Americain aux Victimes de la Guerre" (American Relief to War Victims), it will have William Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France, and M. Pichat, president of the Comite de Secours National, as honorary presidents.

The French people, it was said, are financing the establishment of the organization by a contribution of 20,000,000 francs (about $400,000). The American Red Cross committee in France and the American Red Cross delegation to Europe will cooperate with the new organization.

Nurses Refused ToQuit Under Fire, Soldiers Declare

Copyright by New York Times

London, June 2.—Army nurses stayed on the beach at Dunkerque attending wounded British soldiers, refused to be evacuated, and some were killed, according to wounded soldiers now returning from Flanders.

Army doctors, stripped to the waist, worked in the casualty stations in craters and small tents, where the nurses assisted them to the last.

"These girls worked without stopping, day and night. If they slept they must have done so on their feet," said one soldier. "I saw one party of them dressing the wounded lying in the open, when a German plane began bombing. These nurses just lay down beside the men and continued bandaging.

"We asked them to go back on the rescue ships, but they refused, saying they would go when they had finished their job."

Mrs. Woodfield, Lifelong Resident Of District, Dies

Mrs. Ella V. Woodfield, a lifelong resident of the District, died yesterday at her home, 214 Eighth street northeast, following an illness of several weeks.

The widow of John B. Woodfield, District postoffice veteran, who died in 1931, Mrs. Woodfield was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Croggon. She leaves a son, Frank A. Woodfield, of Baltimore; a grandson and two brothers, Robert Croggon, of Washington, and Owen Croggon, of Prince Georges County.

During the World War Mrs. Woodfield was active in finding housing facilities for girls who came to the city to take Government jobs.

Germans Issue Call For Air Force Recruits

along the Somme and Aisne rivers and the Eastern Front.

The latter action was confined to "artillery fire and some automatic arms fire in the region of Rethel," said the high command.

Military circles were not sure, however, how long the so-called pause might last. This phase is regarded as a pause merely because the direction of the next German offensive has not become apparent.

The Dunkerque drive, of course, was aimed at a complete domination of the Flanders Battlefield. The Allies clung to the city at least to keep the way open for the rest of the French rearguard, withdrawing from the inner plain.

There has been a suggestion, however, that the Allies might try to hold Dunquerque indefinitely as a spearpoint in the Channel flank of the Germans.

It was felt here that German mechanized equipment would have to undergo considerable overhaul and replacement before the next real offensive can take shape.

Authorized sources declared 149 German planes were shot down over Dunkerque Friday and Saturday and that 44 German tanks had been put out of commission by one Allied infantry division.

Losses Put at 600,000

The high command declared that instead of the Allied surrender which Germany had counted on since the withdrawal to Dunkerque was ordered, the Reich's blitz legions had been compelled to fight "incessantly" under constant fire and subject to "numerous" counterattacks.

"This retreat was accomplished by troops pressed on all sides, deprived of rest for 20 days and suddenly uncovered on their left by the capitulation of King Leopold," said the communique.

"This will remain an example of heroic tenacity in the history of the French and British armies."

Germany paid for her successes, the French said, with "immense loss of life and material."

(The United Press reported some French officials claimed German casualties totaled nearly 600,000 in the last 23 days.)

times de la Guerre."

"During these times of distress France is greatly appreciative of the friendly gestures of those who have remained her faithful friends and who have been able to prove their friendship, friends who are always there in the hour of danger," he said.

"Since the very first moment of the drama which has hurt and devastated so many homes and has thrown out upon the roads so many victims the American Red Cross has stood by and with inexhaustible generosity it has brought material aid and the moral comfort of its assistance.

"It has been the magnificent spokesman of the American Nation, that big-hearted Nation, the Nation that has always set a great example. . . .

"Thus at the very time when brutal force pursues its action of destruction and death the American Red Cross and its French associates are affirming the superior victorious power of the spirit of helpfulness, construction and humanity."

Capt. Count de Chambrun was liaison officer between the British Expeditionary Force and the French First Army trapped in the Flanders pocket but was evacuated by sea to England, whence he returned to France.

Reynaud was accompanied to the front by Vice Premier Marshal Philip Petain and Minister of Armaments Raoul Dautry.

"I arrive with the most excellent impression of everything I saw," the premier said, on his arrival back in Paris.

"I am extremely well satisfied with the solidity of our defense system."

Japanese Fail ToCross Han River

Hongkong, June 2 (AP).—Chinese news dispatches reported tonight that Chinese troops have resisted successfully Japanese attempt to cross the Han River in northern Hupeh Province, the western boundary of the penetration in that sector, but that the battle is continuing.

Chinese quarters in Chungking attached much importance to the fighting, declaring that if the Japanese succeed in driving southward and capturing Ichang it would give them a convenient base for constant air raids on the Chinese capital.

10 Britons Escape Norway Afoot, by Sea

By the Associated Press

London, June 2.—Ten veterans of Britain's ill-fated campaign in Norway returned today with a tale of escape that rivaled stories of the Allied withdrawal from Flanders.

The party which landed at a Scottish port, said they were separated from their main force in fighting at Otta, in the Gudbrands Valley south of Dombas. It took them three weeks of trudging through the mountains, in snow 5 feet deep and with only the scantiest food supplies, to reach the coast, where they obtained a rowboat.

They were able to lay in some provisions, and spent the next ten days in the boat until they reached an island where they got a motorboat to take them to Scotland. The boat broke down and a trawler finally towed them into port.

Their spokesman, Private Robert Ogle, said that once they were met by a German officer and an orderly, who told them they were prisoners.

"I pulled out a hand grenade and kept them at bay until we could escape," Ogle said.

"We had a Bren gun that stood us in good stead once when we ran into an enemy party 20 yards below us on a mountainside. They started firing but we wiped them out.

"Once, as we hid in a house, 5,000 Nazi troops marched past us."

Hold on Gibraltar Called an 'Offense'

Madrid, June 2 (AP).—Manuel Aznar, Spanish journalist often regarded as spokesman for the government, declared today that Great "a useless offense," and added that "a useless offense," and added that "true friendship between England and Spain will start" with its return to Spain.

Aznar repeated his contention that Gibraltar has lost all military value and asked "why this insistence in useless injury to Spanish rights? Why this prolongation of the seizure of a parcel of land which is ours!" He said there was no need for discussion because "only Spanish opinions are admissible."

The Neutrals Weaken

Coming at this particular moment, the replacement of Grigore Gafencu by Ion Gigurtu as Rumanian foreign minister is obviously more than a routine change in personnel at Bucharest. It suggests a fundamental shift in the direction of Rumanian policy in the face of an increasingly ominous international situation.

Hitler's blitzkrieg in the Netherlands, Belgium and northern France did more than rout an Allied army and add two more to the lengthening list of nations whose independence has been crushed by the Nazi juggernaut. It also greatly weakened the faith of small nations in those regions toward which the war might spread in the value of Allied assistance and thus in their capacity to defend themselves against German aggression for even a little while.

French, British, Dutch and Belgian troops, numbering probably 1,500,000 men, were unable to hold back the Nazi tide that swept across the Lowlands to the English Channel in a little more than a fortnight. Why not, it is being asked in the capitals of some small nations, accept the inevitable and climb on the totalitarian bandwagon?

Considerations of this kind undoubtedly help to explain the replacement in the Rumanian government of the pro-Ally Gafencu by the pro-German Gigurtu. Rumania happens to be particularly vulnerable. She is surrounded on three sides by nations with claims on her territory and not far away is Germany whose interest in Rumanian oil and wheat has never been greater than now. Tentatively, at least, the shift in the Rumanian foreign ministry constitutes a diplomatic surrender by King Carol to the Third Reich.

Elsewhere, too, the small neutrals are manifesting a tendency to appease Hitler and his partner, Mussolini. Greece has a pledge of support from Great Britain and France should she be attacked. But Gen. Metaxas, the Greek dictator, is reported as being dubious of the value of this guarantee. He may accept the "protection" of Italy. And, as the day of Italy's entry into the war becomes more imminent, Hungary, too, is manifesting a stronger pro-German drift.

Spain has not yet recovered from the devastating civil war of 1936-1939. But Mussolini is believed to be exerting strong pressure on Gen. Franco to join Italy when that country enters the conflict. The pressure may prove irresistible, for without Italian assistance Franco's Nationalists might never have been able to win in Spain.

For the Allies the only bright spot in an otherwise dark picture of crumbling prestige in the Balkans and the Mediterranean is Turkey. The Turks show no signs of abandoning their alliances with Great Britain and France. Indeed, they appear ready to live up to their commitments. But Turkey, like Italy, long ago ceased regarding herself as a neutral and has openly taken the position of a nonbelligerent.

Too Many Cousins

Not even in literature dealing with the old South does one meet such a complicated problem in kinships as confronts the executors of a Washington will. The testatrix provided $1,000 for "each of my cousins living at the time of my death, irrespective of the remoteness of the relationship."

The ultimate possibilities of cousinhood have been demonstrated in the result of this bequest. Two thousand persons in the United States, Ireland and New Zealand have discovered they are relatives, and the beleaguered executors have appealed to the District Court. Presumably there now will be a legal solution of that delicate social and economic problem: "What is a cousin?"

The numerosity of cousins always has been a puzzle to householders, especially if the household is in a strategically located city, our own, for instance. Of course even the expectation of hospitality has deteriorated since the days when cousins came to spend the night and stayed for years, as in the case of Miss Mary Cherry in "So Red the Rose." Nevertheless, some families still think it necessary to keep on hand a special brand of refreshment designated as chasse-cousin. The term is related to chasse-cafe (coffee-chaser), and its meaning should be obvious. Other hosts simply announce the impending arrival of more and closer cousins to take over the guest rooms.

The time-honored classifications of visiting cousins, country cousins, distant cousins and kissing cousins, therefore, need some review even in this day of small apartments. Any light the court's decision may shed on these matters will be a social boon particularly to those who believe that the place of distant relatives is on family trees and not in spare rooms.

Strength In Unity

South American nations are even more concerned than the United States over the turn of events in Europe. Hasty moves toward rearmament are reported from Argentina, Uruguay, Chile and Brazil. Like our own country, these republics of South America have suddenly come to realize that they are in no position to defend themselves against any strong, aggressive power.

The lack of preparedness in South America is epitomized in a single sentence by John W. White, writing from Buenos Aires: "In a crisis the ten South American republics could mobilize only five battleships, three modern cruisers, 24 destroyers and 14 submarines for the defense of more than 13,000 miles of coastlines on three oceans." Air forces are correspondingly weak, although Argentina and some other countries are now greatly strengthening their fleets. No South American army could offer effective resistance to mechanized forces such as those now being used in Europe.

Every move that is made in Latin America to bolster up inadequate defenses is a net gain. Yet it is a simple fact that when their rearmament programs have been completed none of these countries will be in a position to defend itself against a first-class power. Their only hope of saving themselves from invasion, if a threat to their security arises, will lie in joint action. And that means not only joint action among themselves but also with the United States.

There are many indications that Latin-American statesmen and a considerable portion of the people in those countries are fully cognizant of this fact. At the same time our own Government and people realize that defense of the entire Western Hemisphere is essential to the security of the United States. Merely to insure the Panama Canal against possible damage by bombardment it is imperative for the United States to prevent any potentially hostile power from establishing air bases in South America.

In these circumstances a common defense policy among the American governments becomes an urgent necessity. The solidarity of the 21 republics in this hemisphere has already been declared and machinery for joint consultation in the face of an emergency has been set up. That is a good start. But more positive arrangements for mutual defense are now demanded by the threat of a German victory in Europe.

The capitals of both North and South America cannot too quickly face this practical necessity. It is true that the countries of the Western Hemisphere have varied interests. They do not always see eye to eye on questions of international policy. But they have one common interest which overshadows every difference of language, culture, climate and economic evolution. That single interest is preservation of their national integrity, of their homes and their cities and their way of life, against aggression from any foreign power.

If the Americas are ready to face their problem realistically, they will hastily supplement their rearmament programs by negotiations looking toward a joint defense policy.

Tragedy Twice Imposed

No casualty lists have been published by either side, so the loss of life in the European war cannot be accurately estimated. All that is known is that the slaughter has been terrific.

Each side claims to have inflicted heavier losses on the enemy than it has sustained. Where Germany's dive-bombers and heavy tanks have operated in concentrated force their victims have far outnumbered their casualties. But Nazi generals have also thrown their infantry into ferocious attacks with ruthless disregard for losses. Soldiers returning from the front report many instances in which column after column of German troops were mowed down as they attacked.

The awful truth is that losses on both sides are enormous. And those losses are doubly tragic for Great Britain, Belgium, France and Germany, for the generation now fighting with such fierce courage had already been decimated by the World War.

Men in their twenties are bearing the brunt of the battle. Before the present hostilities broke out Europe already had a shortage of such young men because of the sharp drop in the birth rate during the World War. Statisticians point out, for example, that in 1921 French children of age 4 were no more numerous than adults of 65. Normally children of 4 would outnumber men and women of 65 by two to one.

So the casualties of this war are falling chiefly upon a generation of young men whose numbers were sharply reduced because of the hardships and deaths suffered by their fathers in 1914-18. Now war and its aftermath will once more cut down the birth rate within this decimated generation. Aside from the slaughter of young men who would normally be fathers a few years hence, the cost of military equipment and the destruction it produces will impose a staggering economic burden upon the nations of Europe. Hardships of this sort react on the birth rate almost as disastrously as war itself.

To this colossal waste of man power must be added the casualties suffered by civilians. Noncombatants have been killed in greater numbers than ever before in similar periods of fighting. Tragedy of almost inconceivable proportions will stalk behind the victors whoever they may be.

The Leche Conviction

Great credit is due to Assistant Attorney General O. John Rogge for the relentless persistency with which he has conducted his investigation of political conditions in Louisiana. Following the conviction last Saturday of former Gov. Richard W. Leche for use of the mails to defraud, Mr. Rogge laconically remarked: "We are now out of the trenches in Louisiana. Michigan will be our next base of operations."

The assurance that the Federal authorities will continue their efforts to bring to book corrupt politicians who are violating Federal laws is cheering. The conviction of individual culprits is, of course, of minor importance compared to the major achievement of destroying a corrupt political machine and giving the forces of decency an opportunity to make themselves effective. But it is desirable that those who have used public office to defraud should be relentlessly prosecuted as a warning to others who may be tempted to follow in their footsteps.

Although interest is at the moment concentrated upon defense problems and our relations with the outside world, it is as necessary as ever to protect domestic institutions from assaults by grafters. Indeed, the danger from such elements is especially great at a time when the Nation is distracted by new problems. It is encouraging, therefore, to know that Mr. Rogge's reforming zeal has not suffered any diminution because of his recent successes in Louisiana.

Genuine Cooperation

When spokesmen for the investment trusts and SEC officials appeared before a Senate subcommittee last week with a rewritten bill to regulate investment trusts Senator Wagner was much gratified. He said that it was a "magnificent" example of how "cooperation between Government and industry may achieve reasonable and sound legislation."

This high praise appears to be well deserved. The first draft of the SEC's bill to regulate investment trusts was bitterly attacked by representatives of that business. However, instead of taking a purely obstructionist attitude or being content with empty professions in favor of "reasonable" regulation, the critics presented their views in detail. They offered specific proposals for regulation, designed to eliminate abuses without unduly hampering managerial functions.

No doubt time would have been saved and friction avoided if the SEC and representatives of the investment trusts had ironed out their differences in advance of committee hearings. But it is quite possible that the agreement reached after public airing of opposed views will be more satisfactory than an agreement based on preliminary discussions would have been.

With the regulatory agency and spokesmen for the industry now in accord, the chances of favorable action at this session upon a long delayed and much needed measure to curb abuses in the investment trust field appear to be greatly improved.

Strange Argument

David Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, and Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, agree that there are corrupt elements in the A. F. of L. Mr. Dubinsky insists that forceful action should be taken to rid the labor movement of persons with criminal records. But Mr. Woll protests that it is impossible to oust undesirables from positions of influence in international unions without infringing the democratic rights of workers.

If that is the case, the entire organization of the A. F. of L. is in need of reconstitution. Autonomy for the labor unions affiliated with a central body certainly should carry with it an obligation to maintain standards of conduct above reproach. Either the A. F. of L. should demand compliance with requests for a housecleaning or it should resort to expulsion in case unions harbor criminal or dishonest persons.

To insist that respect for the democratic rights of local unions necessitates toleration of oppressive and brutal tactics and racketeering activities is sheer nonsense.

In this hard-boiled age it seems that more depends on what you have under your belt than under your hat.

A fanatic is a person who is highly enthusiastic about something in which you are not interested.

If the average person were to think twice before he spoke, he'd be too exhausted to talk.

Criticism of USHA

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It's a sad state of affairs when a project overruns its boundaries and leaps into a field foreign to its original course. I'm speaking of the USHA. The Post's editorial of May 27, on the nearsightedness of those who are trying to make a housing project of the USHA speaks well of poor management.

Providing temporary living quarters for workers in the new plants meeting the present needs of national defense is not clearing slums, is not building or encouraging the building of housing projects for families of low income, and involves a great deal of money. The USHA would do well to think twice before pursuing its present trend. The FHA can well handle that.

CHARLES ALEXANDER.
Washington, May 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt is asking more money to increase the capital of the U. S. Housing Authority, presumably the $800,000,000 the House refused to authorize last year.

That is asking a further burden on Federal taxpayers for the production of more property upon which the States and municipalities may levy taxes—another twist in the vicious circle. Under present taxing methods one builds or buys a house or other improvement for private use and community advantage, only to begin paying for it all over again in taxes, as though he had perpetrated a public nuisance to subject him to annual fines.

There would be no need of Federal or other public aid to housing if taxes were lifted from improvements and placed upon land, improved and unimproved, in the measure of its actual or potential annual value.

WALTER N. CAMPBELL.
Washington, May 25.

Excited Times

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "On 'Fifth Columns,'" May 25, was grand; keep talking that way as long as you can. The President warned us against spreaders of "discord." In these times excited people do not distinguish carefully between the sincere disagreement of loyal Americans and the dissension of "foreign agents." In effect the President has made criticism and opposition difficult, if not unpatriotic. That is a more immediate danger to our democracy than Hitler.

BRUCE WAYBUR.
Washington, May 27.

England's Children

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: American opinion is well-nigh unanimous in its sympathy for the Allied cause, but when it comes to implementing that sympathy into effective aid radical differences of opinion prevent action.

I wish to propose an effective measure of aid upon which Republicans and Democrats, isolationists and interventionists, pacifists and fighters, can agree.

My proposal is that we offer asylum for the duration of the war to the children of the British Isles, thus relieving the beleaguered British from the burden of importing food to feed their hungry mouths and, more important, preserving their lives from German bombs.

If Hitler realizes his ambition to conquer the British Isles, it can only come after wholesale destruction by airplane and long range bombardment which will inevitably take heavy toll of the children.

Whether one's feeling toward the British be one of dislike or affection, envy or admiration, if he has visited the British Isles he must agree that the tranquillity which has blessed them for almost 300 years has produced the most civilized group of peoples in the world. Should not the seeds of that civilization be preserved?

JOHN R. WALKER.
Washington, May 25.

Changing Horses

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Changing horses in midstream? Well, Britain and France have just dismissed the leaders whose incompetency left them unprepared to meet the gravest peril in their history, and we in the United States must do the same thing, for the same reason.

FRANK PUTNAM.
Houston, Tex., May 27.

Money for Arms

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt, in tonight's fireside chat, spoke a lot about defense but not a word about keeping us out of war. The best military brains in this country point out that we are in no danger of attack so long as we control the sea approaches, yet the President calls for a $3,000,000,000 outlay for defense purposes. Is it possible that these vast armaments are not for defense at all? Perish the thought! Yet it seems that the "big boys" of Wall street know that the British Empire is cracking and are preparing to gather up the pieces.

The President spoke about the "undiluted poison" of foreign agents—the "fifth column." Although he did not mention names, he must have meant the British lords and ladies, the Lord Lothians, the Noel Cowards, the visiting Duff Coopers, and other British propagandists who are working day and night together with our native sons in Wall street to get us into the war on the British side.

The President sees no justification for increasing working hours, yet seems to be in accord with lifting the restrictions of the Walsh-Healy Act, which prohibits workers on Government contracts to work more than eight hours a day. Nor does he see any justification for restricting aid to the farmer, yet he cuts relief for the farmer to the bone. He further states that labor would be represented in the counsels. My good tooth is offered in wager that labor will be represented by very "safe" men.

Alas, "it would be unfair to expect industrial corporations or their investors" to supply the capital "when a change in the international situation might stop or curtail orders a year or two hence." So the President comes to the rescue of the poor munition makers and says, "therefore, the Government of the United States stands ready to advance the necessary money." How lavish the President is with the public money when munition makers will benefit.

JOHN S. MILLMAN.
Washington, May 26.

Unionist View

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Allow me to congratulate you on your editorial "On 'Fifth Columns,'" which appeared in The Post of May 25. The talk which is going around would, as you have said, make anyone think that the United States was now a nation at war. The vast majority of the American people want peace, and yet anyone who urges that we benefit from our experience and refuse to follow the 1914 road of sales, credits, loans, war, is immediately labeled "Fifth Column."

As a member of organized labor, I realize that trade-unionists, especially, must beware of "Fifth Column" hysteria. One of the principal objectives of the drive is the suppression of labor's rights. Trade unionists who insist upon maintaining their hard won standards, and seeing that their wages keep pace with rising living costs will be dubbed "Fifth Column" in short order.

Already Senator La Follette has been called un-American in the Senate because of his bill to impose severe penalties on employers using labor spies and strikebreakers. The Army, the Navy and the Maritime Commission are said to be strongly opposed to the bill because it would threaten "uninterrupted supply of necessities in any emergency."

It seems to me that the real "Fifth Columnists" are the people who are undermining our American democracy by encouraging war hysteria in this country.

ELEANOR FOWLER.
Washington, May 28.

Urges Aid To Allies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is said that God helps those who help themselves. Perhaps it would be better to say that God helps those who help others. If we had been willing to help the Allies in this desperate and just war they are waging, we would be in a better position now to help ourselves. This has been to me the great lesson recent events have taught us, that the same golden rule applies to nations as to individuals. The democracies would not stand together and so they fall separately. It is yet time for us to reverse this trend, to throw in our weight on the side of the Allies. What is keeping us back? Are we still not convinced there is a just cause for this war? Have we any sympathy for Hitler's gang of murderers? No. We know that France and England are doing a good job that has to be done and are in danger of perishing in the attempt. What is keeping us back then? The fear of not being repaid if we enter the war? But that is laughable. We don't wage wars for profit, we wage them because there is force which is bent on destroying us and we have to oppose it. Our reward is not in dollars but in survival. If it is not that which is keeping us back, what is it? Is it a neurosis of fear, left by the last war? Is it German propaganda? Is it inertia? Is it cowardice?

I have heard it said that we must not throw away our men in Europe, but keep them to defend our own shores. I think England is just as fond of her men as we are of ours, but the prospect of having to use them on her own soil fills her with dismay. Why should we be so anxious to share the fate of the neutral countries in Europe and to wait until our own cities are bombed and our roads are filled with refugees? It can't happen? They thought so in Europe. Give those Nazis time and they'll do anything.

As a matter of fact, the Allies are not asking for our men. They are asking for machines. Their fine boys are ground down pitilessly under tanks and airplanes. Admittedly they have been foolish not to prepare themselves better, but we have no right to throw so much as a pebble at them, considering our own state of affairs.

Oh, we will wake up, we will—next month, perhaps? But then it may be too late. It took Hitler three weeks to conquer the Lowlands and part of France. The next few weeks may be decisive. Are we going to do something about it, or aren't we? If we're not, good-by to America.

The Post Impressionist

The Touch

It was going to be a touch. The appraising way he looked me over signaled it even before his mouth spread into the practiced lines of a professionally game smile as he veered over to intercept me on my half of the sidewalk.

"Buddy," he began cheerfully, half-blocking my way as we came face to face, "will you do a fellow a favor?"

He'd been drinking, but he wasn't drunk. He didn't wheedle. His approach was definitely man to man, with undertones of the white collar worker temporarily down on his luck. He looked like any one of the dinner-bound throng swinging into the entrance of the sprawling Sixteenth street apartment house before which we'd come to a halt.

"Sure," I replied cautiously, deliberately supplying the proper cue, ". . . I will if I can." I wanted it to seem easy.

He'd tagged me correctly. Normally I'm good for anywhere from a dime to a quarter, depending upon the technique. But this happened to be Friday night, and I've never learned to make my salary last from one Saturday to the next pay day. My own pockets were completely empty, so I felt none of the half guilty resentment the panhandler usually arouses.

"Well, sir . . ." he began, the smile giving way to an earnest, half-ashamed expression as he launched into the familiar patter of the ride hitched from New York on the back of a truck on the promise of a job that would begin Monday and the necessity for something to tide him over until he got on his feet.

Pretending a gullible interest, I let him run smoothly through the entries spiel, making sympathetic noises at each well-timed pause. The dinner party at which I was expected would be fashionably late; I had time to hear him through. As misfortune piled glibly on misfortune, I gleefully anticipated the denouement when I announced that I, too, was broke.

About 35, clean-shaven and ruddy, he was well dressed in a loud, Broadway fashion. Under his snappy gray suit he wore a striped demi-bosom shirt of a purplish hue, with a matching tie of darker shade knotted neatly between the points of a stiff collar.

He talked on, never overlaying his bid for sympathy, referring to himself wryly as a "temporary bum."

"Brother," I said after a pause when he'd finished, "when did you eat last?"

"Not since this morning," he answered uncertainly, "and then only some doughnuts and coffee." He waited expectantly.

"Brother," I said deliberately, "my last meal was last night," adding, quite truthfully, "I haven't a cent to my name—not even a cigarette."

"Yeah?" he asked suspiciously. "You kidding me?"

I solemnly assured him I wasn't.

His manner changed instantly to one of cheerful good-fellowship. "That's one on me," he laughed, clapping me on the shoulder. "Say! You're pretty well dressed to be on the bum. That suit you got on cost at least 65 bucks. I know. I'm an auctioneer when I'm working."

"Hell!" he suddenly blurted. "You're broke, and I'm broke. Let's see what we got!"

Digging into his trousers pocket, he unearthed four pennies and two fair-sized cigarette butts. "These certainly ain't goona do us no good," he said, looking disdainfully at the coppers in his palm, "but at least we got smokes—that is," he added anxiously, "if you don't mind snipes?"

"You know," said my new friend, taking my elbow as we started walking along together, "you're pretty young to be on your uppers. Sound as if you got education, too."

I made a deprecating noise implying the camaraderie of all down-and-outers. "This is one tough town. I've been here a month, and I still can't find work," I lied.

"Aw, I'm not worried," said my companion confidently. "I can always get work. I'm an auctioneer and a ground man—and a good one! Why," he confided, "I even got a family here, but you don't think I'm gonna let them see me this way when I been drinking? No, sir!"

Our cigarettes were almost finished and we were nearing the apartment house where my hosts for the evening lived.

"Kid!" my friend asked suddenly, "you need a drink?"

Hesitantly, I said I could always use one.

"O. K.," he announced. "We'll be a couple of real bums!"

"Here comes a sucker now," he said, glancing past me at a short, belligerent-looking man approaching us at a rapid pace.

Foolishly, I stood rock still, debating whether to brazen it out or flee. The short man halted.

"Mister," began my friend in the familiar tone, "can you do my buddy and me here a favor? We're broke and we thought maybe you'd . . ."

I heard no more, for I was already out of earshot, walking quickly up the street.

I had gone perhaps half a block when I heard my deserted companion call after me, hurt and astonishment mingled in his voice:

"Hey, Buddy! Where ya going?"

I quickened my pace.

"Hey!" he shouted. "Wait up, partner. I got two bits outa the sucker. How about that drink? Whatsa matter . . ?"

I wish now that I hadn't lost my nerve.

Writers' Rebellion

IN CALLING attention to the sympathy of Mrs. Roosevelt and Harold Ickes for organizations which are Trojan horses of the Communist stable it is not my intention to say or insinuate that they sympathize with communism. The explanation of their conduct is beyond me. I will just observe that they persistently give aid and comfort to the Communists and conspicuously neglect opportunities to throw into their teeth public repudiation of everything they stand for, and let it go at that.

As far as human rights and American processes are concerned, Communism on the one hand and Nazi-Fascism on the other are equal and almost indistinguishable. Neither Mrs. Roosevelt nor Mr. Ickes would speak at a rally of the anti-American bund or sit at the political obscenities of any of the insidious Italian Black Shirt organizations. They would not be found dead at any meeting of the native-stock brutalitarian groups which profane the Christian symbol. But they do attend occasions of organizations which are heavily influenced by the Communists, and they default golden opportunities to encourage the loyal American elements by denouncing communism and its sinister works.

I HAVE NOTED that Mr. Ickes made an appearance under the auspices of the New York Newspaper Guild, which is controlled by the Communists, and that Mrs. Roosevelt is a member of the American Newspaper Guild in a status free of certain obligations that fall on rank-and-file members. The rank and file of the New York Guild have suffered much from the aggravations and harassments of the Communists in control. A word or sign of encouragement to them would not be improper and would be a helpful blow in their fight.

And it is not a pretty fight. The situation is such that high-grade Americans can't quit the guild, because each resignation of an anti-Communist member tends to increase the power of the Communists. Should Communist control become absolute they might impose the closed shop and totally exclude from employment as enemies of labor all who had quit the guild. This is not an academic problem; it is a bread and butter problem.

I have produced corroboration of my charge that the Communists run the New York guild, which in turn controls the national organization, out of a publication issued by an exasperated and aroused, but hitherto unorganized, majority of the members. To present its case this majority faction had to create its own publication, because the Guild Reporter, the official paper of the union, is a ballyhoo organ of the Communists in control. In tone and ethics the Reporter is an unworkmanlike initiation of the Communist Daily Worker, and in journalistic quality it is a reproach to any organization of newspaper people.

The rebel faction of the New York guild has put the ball into play, and is now kicking it around in this rival publication, called the Guild Progressive. In this paper the members are told, for the first time, how the Communists got and have retained their control of an organization which is supposed to abide by democratic methods. They do it by control of little "pocket borough" units. Seven members may organize a unit, and inasmuch as New York is positively crawling with radical and foreign language publications, many of which have no economic substance, these minorities can slaughter the Americans not only in New York but in other cities where the guild is organized.

UNDER THE VOTING system all units of from 7 to 25 members have one vote each in the assembly. The larger units are allowed only one vote for each 25 members, and the rebel paper shows that six units having a total of only 12 members had the voting power of 150 members on the regular American papers. These six units had fallen below even the minimum requirement of seven members apiece, but were still voting as units. And a Spanish Communist sheet was still recognized long after it had ceased to exist.

At one meeting, the Progressive reports, "At least three and maybe four" votes were cast for the labor press unit, which was entitled to two votes.

"No roll calls are taken," says the Progressive. "No attempt is made to find out who is legally present and who is illegally present. Delegates from unconstitutional units apparently vote along with those from constitutional units. Alternates show up with regular delegates and vote along with them viva voce. Sometimes the wives or sweethearts of delegates appear and join lustily in voting for the (Communists) management."

If Mrs. Roosevelt or Mr. Ickes would ever strike just one blow against this influence the Americans, I am sure, would be much obliged.

Unearned Increment

By Dorothy Thompson

Taking Our Liberties For Granted

I AM NOT among those who think that we are threatened with an imminent invasion, either from Mars or from the Nazis. It is something quite different with which we are threatened—the complete collapse of the world of which we are an integral part, and the redistribution and reorganization of that world, socially, economically, politically, financially and spiritually, in such a manner as will menace our institutions, our way of life and our possibility of independent survival.

Readjustments that affect us radically, that will amount, in fact, to a revolution, will be made while we stand helplessly by, unable effectively to protest or effectively to intervene, waiting to take what we are given—and like it.

THE QUESTION is not whether we should go to war. It is an idle question, because even if we should at this moment, we could not. In spite of the fact that this blitzkrieg against the whole existing order has been systematically and openly prepared for seven years, it has been the fashion to demur at those who have harped upon it as a prime fact to be considered in the world today, and to call them panicky, war mongers and hysterical.

Now, it seems to me, the hysteria is in the other camp. The country is suddenly aware that we are in a planetary crisis, and that, in a world where only the possession of force can influence events, we are unarmed. At this moment, did we possess the force, we could probably influence, modify, or even determine the whole course of history without even using the force, as Hitler determined what is happening now, not in Holland but at Munich; not by war but by his ability to make it.

THERE IS NOTHING surprising about what has happened except its speed. It has been coming inexorably—yesterday, and the day before yesterday, and the day before that—this spring, and last spring, and the spring before that—and we were unarmed then, too. And many of the voices now raised in panic and denunciation of our unpreparedness are precisely the ones who have tried hardest in the past to convince the Nation that there was no cause for alarm.

What we need now is not panic, not denunciation, not unconsidered action, but awakening, analysis and preparation—not for any eventuality, but for the most likely eventualities. And part of this preparation must begin with a ruthless and unsparing self-criticism.

The balance sheet of history is mercilessly exact. Hitler's armies are battering down frontiers, armies, peoples, institutions and a whole world, because that world has offered itself to this fate. For years it has presented such a spectacle of degeneration and decline as to invite the scourge.

We are threatened from without only because we have become weak within. That weakness is not primarily in lack of arms nor in the nefarious work of fifth columns. The latter merely exploit our weakness—and criminals and gangsters were exploiting it long before fifth columns were ever formed. And then there was not a self-confessed rapist or murderer but could find some respectable lawyer to plead his case.

WE HAVE BEEN living for a generation on unearned increment, wasting and abusing the liberties which our ancestors won for us in blood; mortgaging our children's patrimony to pay today's bills which are our own.

Born in liberty, we have forgotten the stern fact of liberty—namely, that it involves the highest degree of personal and group responsibility. Freedom without responsibility means anarchy. When the President said, a week ago Sunday, that we do not need to abandon our democracy to match the strength of aggressors, he spoke the truth. We do not need to abandon it, but we do need to go back to it—to go back to its normal and intellectual foundations and build on them again.

Government by agitator-led masses is not American democracy. The concept that there is some sacred wisdom inherent in majorities however ignorant, is not American democracy. The Congressman or Senator who is afraid to have a mind of his own and is unwilling to risk his political life for his convictions, reading his telegrams and studying the composition of organized groups before he can make up his mind about anything, is not a democratic statesman but merely a paid agent, and the agent, furthermore, of the most impulsive and easiest to stampede, and the movement articulately greedy and venal.

Everywhere power has been divorced from responsibility.

Our trade unions have power without an ounce of responsibility for the productive process or for the community. Many of them are dictator-led at that. Their bosses can call strikes at their own will; they can make demands that close an industry and throw men into the streets; they resort to terror over their own members; they prevent management from exercising responsibility and do not even claim it for themselves. In behalf of "Labor" they offend the very spirit of labor, undermining standards of work and divorcing remuneration from competency. The same, in other manifestations, holds true for industry, banking and our intellectual life.

Profiteers are derided, in a world where profiteering is the characteristic of the day. If a banker, manufacturer or speculator gyps or boycotts the community in the interest of heavier dividends, self-voted bonuses and inflated profits, he is either denounced as a malefactor, or becomes an ambassador, depending upon his politics; and the while he is denounced he is emulated by the denouncers. For unearned increment has become the national dream. If you get it one way you are a profiteer; if another you are a contributor to "purchasing power."

INTEGRITY, HONESTY and noble passion are held up to ridicule. The independent personality is the butt of every cheap joke. Let a man emerge amongst us of truly superior quality and a thousand rats will begin gnawing at his legs to topple him down. If he is a poet, let him write one book inferior to himself and the jackals will howl with glee to proclaim him finished. Let him change his mind through the achievement of wisdom, and he will be called a renegade. A head that stands above the mass must expect to be removed.

To care about anything is to be quaintly ridiculous. Tolerance has been the watchword—that tolerance which comes of believing in nothing, loving nothing, hating nothing, the incapacity for indignation or enthusiasm, the paralysis of action—the tolerance which means that faith has gone out of the human heart and conviction out of the mind.

And this has nothing whatever to do with American democracy, which conceived a world in which personalities could emerge regardless of origin, and whose literature has exalted men and not masses.

WE ARE WEAK because we have expended our savings and our substance, and mortgaged our future under a system by which those on the directors' board or in the polling booth try to vote themselves an "adequate" income, under the theory that they did not ask to be born, that the world owes them a living and that fair remuneration is whatever the traffic will bear.

What we did from 1926 to 1929 on a world-wide scale, lending all over the world in order to create purchasing power regardless of assets—a policy which collapsed Europe and gave us Hitler—we have been doing since within our own border, and the results will be the same unless we change those ways.

We contemplate leading a hemisphere, when we cannot decently govern ourselves.

THE DEGENERATION of values and the lack of standards are what has made us spend billions without abolishing unemployment or slums or poverty. Instead of lifting the proletariat to a middle-class standard of living, we are pushing the middle classes into the proletriat. Instead of freeing the creative power of American industry under a joyful affirmation of its social responsibility and power, we are shackling it to an irresponsible bureaucracy, and under the guise of modifying capitalism are destroying all creative impulses.

Very soon we shall have to take a leading place in the world or a back seat. If it is to be the former, we must begin by making over ourselves and living in reality and not illusion. There is no cause for fear, but neither is there any cause for thinking that everything is just daisy.

The reality demands sacrificial devotion, intensely hard work by every one, spiritual and intellectual conviction, and out of it the greatest happiness there is—that which comes of uncoerced dedication to a common and lofty cause.

Panic is the result of rude awakening from a false dream. The contemplation of reality is the beginning of creative courage and corporate salvation.

MEETING THE MASTER?
If Mussolini enters the war, says Ernest Lindley, he is either failing to look realistically to the future of the Italian people or accepting the overlordship of Hitler's Nazis in Europe

Mussolini's Choice

By Ernest Lindley

Vassalage To Nazi Empire?

IF MUSSOLINI enters the war on the German side—and as I write it looks as if he were poised for the plunge—it must be for one of two reasons:

(1) He is living in the past instead of considering objectively the future of the Italian people.

(2) He already accepts German domination of Europe—and perhaps of some of the rest of the world—as inevitable.

The Italians are proud, capable and prolific. In these respects they are similar to the Germans. Also, like the Germans, they were late in achieving national unity and so in acquiring their share of the colonial spoils of the world. Like the Germans, also, they felt aggrieved by the Treaty of Versailles—the Germans because they lost that war and the Italians because they did not receive the rewards they had been promised by the British and French.

There are at least four important differences between the Germans and the Italians.

The Germans outnumber the Italians two to one.

The Germans have a capacity for thorough organization which is unmatched by the Italians or any other people.

The Germans are the greatest industrial power on the continent of Europe. While their resources in raw materials are not great, they are immensely greater than the Italians'. If the Germans win this war, they will own or control most of the heavy industrial power—the kind that counts in war—outside the United States. For it has become plain that the Russians have not learned how to make effective their immense resources in raw materials and their ever-growing industrial capacity. They must have technicians and managers from abroad. And if Germany wins this phase of the war, these experts will be wholly German. And it will be up to the Germans to decide whether they wish to control Russia by the infiltration of technicians and managers or by outright military power.

Teutonic culture and Latin culture do not harmonize.

TO THE ITALIANS it has been humiliating to be a numerous, energetic and capable people cooped up in the Mediterranean, begrudgingly allowed the scraps of colonial possessions, and compelled to make obeisance every time an Italian ship enters or leaves the Inland Sea via Gibraltar or Suez.

The minimum ambition of the Italians has been, in substance, for equality with the British and French in the area which they regard as their proper sphere of influence. Mussolini has presented to his people the somewhat larger dream of a reconstruction of the Roman Empire in which Italian power would supersede British and French power in the Mediterranean. This ambition, of course, can be achieved only at the expense of the British and French.

But it supposes—and this is the vital point—that Great Britain and France still exist as important military and economic powers.

For the plain fact is that the means by which military power is built up and maintained are no longer the same as they were in the days of the Roman Empire. Egypt can supply cotton; Algeria, wheat; Tunisia, oranges and lemons. But the metals and the fuel which are indispensable to modern armed power do not exist in sufficient quantities in the Mediterranean area to enable Italy to become a powerful independent empire—even if Italy were allowed the time to organize all the resources within this area and to build the factories with which to convert them into military strength.

With or without a Mediterranean empire, Italy will be helpless if Germany achieves a total victory over Great Britain and France. Italy cannot enjoy an empire, large or small, unless a balance of power can be preserved in Europe. A Germany which has won a total victory over France and Great Britain can dominate Italy and all the colonial possessions the Italians can pick up in the Mediterrean with not much more difficulty than it now dominates Denmark. For the materials of which arms are made and the means to manufacture them will be in German hands. The one possible exception is petroleum. And it is doubtful whether, if the Allied empires collapse, the Italians can get to the oil of the Near East before the Russians—or the Germans—do.

IN A EUROPE reorganized by Germany what would become of Italian industry? Like French industry, it would be allowed to produce only what fitted into the German economic scheme. The Italian frontiers, concentrated in the north by Italy, and therefore Italian military power, would be completely at the mercy of German air and military power. Italy would be allowed only so much of a fleet as the Germans wanted it to have and allowed to use it only as German interests were furthered. The role of Italy probably would be to produce food for the German industrialized state—for the Italians are excellent cultivators of the land. And, also, to serve as a pleasant place for German soldiers and workers to take their vacations.

Mussolini has been regarded as a realist. But if he is a realist how can he suppose that in a Europe organized by Germany, in which Britain and France have been destroyed as military and naval powers, Italy can exist except as an obedient vassal of Germany? It is possible that Mussolini has accepted as inevitable the German domination of Europe, and therefore of Italy. It may be that he thinks his people might as well acquiesce in this as gracefully as possible, while acquiring meanwhile such superficial attributes of glory as they can. If so, his policy is dictated by fear, which no momentary successes in acquiring Corsica, Malta or Tunisia, or even Gibraltar or Suez, could conceal from Italians a few years hence.

Cavour must be writhing in his grave if Mussolini really proposes to enter the war on the side of Germany. If the venture is successful it will almost certainly make Italy a vassal of Germany. If it fails it will deprive Italy of the empire which it now has and perhaps condemn its people to poverty far worse than they now suffer.

AN ELEMENTARY regard for the long teachings of power politics—a subject on which a great Italian, Machiavelli, remains an authority—would seem to require that Mussolini first make every effort within his power to bring about a negotiated peace. Such a peace as would leave France and Britain powerful states. If that effort fails, the longer range Italian interests would point toward either real Italian neutrality—not a threatening nonbelligerency favorable to Germany—or entry into the war on the side of the Allies.

Italy as a nation, or as an empire, cannot endure except as a vassal unless a balance of power is preserved in Europe. If France and England are overwhelmed the balance of power is destroyed—and with it Italy goes to destruction or into vassalage for so long as the German Empire endures.

The Cobra's Fangs

By Barnet Nover

Italy And The Hypnotized Allies

OF ALL THE FANTASTIC situations which have occurred in the nightmarish world of the last years none is, perhaps, more fantastic than the attitude which the Allies have displayed and continue to display toward Italy.

Let us examine the facts: A little over a year ago Italy and Germany cemented a "pact of steel." This offensive-defensive alliance was the continuation and the climax of the Berlin-Rome axis which Hitler and Mussolini had alternately and jointly used as an effective club with which to browbeat and blackmail Great Britain and France.

However, when Germany launched her blitzkrieg against Poland and the Allies declared war on the Reich, Italy remained aloof, Count Ciano later explaining that Italy had been opposed to going to war in September because she needed time to complete her preparations.

THE ALLIES were relieved. They comforted themselves with the belief that the axis was broken. They were cheered by the reports of returning travelers that the Italian people were overwhelmingly anti-Nazi, and happy to be at peace. Despite realistic warnings by the French general staff that no time should be wasted in forcing Italy to choose sides, Allied statesmen began to regard Mussolini as a great and good friend. British and French—and American—denunciations of totalitarianism were carefully confined to the German and Russian varieties, as though Italian fascism were only a harmless aberration.

This wishful thinking was bad enough. What was worse was that the Allies went out of their way to extend favors to the Fascist government. For months Italy was treated with special leniency so far as the operations of the blockade were concerned. The spirit of appeasement was still alive. And all the time—with Allied help—Italy expanded her war preparations.

YET FROM the first Mussolini did nothing to disguise his ultimate intentions. During the early weeks of the war there was, to be true, a cessation of talk in the Fascist press regarding the axis. It was not long, however, before Italian spokesmen began to announce that Italy was not a neutral, only a nonbelligerent. And in every stage of the European conflict, from the German attack on Poland to the Allied defeat in Flanders, the Italian press and radio have left no stone unturned in playing up the German side of the news and in ignoring when not distorting the Allied side. The Vatican newspaper, Osservatore Romano, which would not stoop to such tactics, was barred from circulation.

The Duce needed time, time to plant the virulent anti-British feeling, time to complete two 35,000-ton battleships, time to build defenses along the Alpine passes leading from France, time to expand the Italian air force time to organize a war industry, so far as possible, time to strengthen the army, whose weakness had been exposed in the 1939 maneuvers. And the Allies were generous in giving Mussolini time.

WEEKS AGO the attitude of the Italian government toward the Allies changed from one of verbal hostility to one of potential belligerence. One Fascist spokesman after another began to announce that Italy was going into the war and was only awaiting the proper moment. And that moment, it was made clear, was to be when the Allies had become so weak that the addition of the Fascist kingdom to the list of their enemies would mean their speedy defeat.

Recently Italy began openly discussing her imminent entry into the war. She has made no secret of her preparations. They have been undertaken in the full light of publicity. By this time the Allies had become alarmed but their reaction to Italy's threat was entirely defensive. British merchant ships were ordered out of the Mediterranean and told to use the longer Cape route to the Orient. A large British and French naval force was sent to Alexandria and the army which Gen. Weygand had assembled in the Near East was strengthened. But at no time the Allies has shown the slightest willingness to take the initiative.

In other words, Mussolini can strike when and wherever it suits his fancy; there is to be no Allied answering blow until after he has struck. The cobra's fangs are exposed and ready to strike but the Allies are and have been too hypnotized to do anything about it.

Their attitude toward Italy has been a compound of incredulity and fatalism. Mussolini has been frank with them, so frank that for a long time they would not believe him. Now that they do, they find themselves paralyzed. It is not in their code to attack first, to launch a blitzkrieg on Italy capable of demoralizing Italy's mobilization and preventing her from putting forward her full effort. But the totalitarian dictators have no such scruples.

MUCH HAS BEEN written during these last days of the power, ferocity and deadly efficiency of the German war machine. But let us not ignore the self-imposed handicap under which the Allies have operated from the first.

By respecting Norwegian, Dutch and Belgian neutrality, they had no choice but to give the initiative to Hitler. He could pick the time and the place for attack, and the Allies had to wait to be invited before coming to the rescue of the invaded neutrals. Hitler could plan the assault on Scandinavia and the Low Countries down to the last detail; the Allies could only make their plans after the Nazi blow had fallen. Mussolini may strike at Egypt or Gibraltar or Corsica or somewhere else. The Allies have to prepare for all of these eventualities, and in doing so to divide and weaken their forces.

In dealing with blackguards they have persisted in acting like gentlemen. The results may prove fatal.

Tablet Unveiled To Dr. C. E. Smith At St. Thomas'

Led by Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector, the congregation of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, worship place of President Roosevelt, yesterday dedicated a tablet to the late Dr. C. Ernest Smith, for 34 years rector there.

Preaching from the pulpit shortly after unveiling the tablet, Dr. Wilkinson lauded the accomplishments of his predecessor, who died one year ago yesterday.

After reviewing the former rector's early life, he told how he came to St. Thomas' in 1902 and subsequently helped cancel the church debt, raised an endowment fund, built a parish house and rectory and enlarged and beautified the church. Dr. Smith retired on June 30, 1936.

More than 500 men and women attended the dedication service.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Lost Armies

Mud caked with blood in their faces—
Battered and bleeding and sore—
Scourged by the lashes of Satan—
Raw from the hell that is war.

Caught in the curtains of Hades—
Hunted by engines of death—
Hounded by "things," not by humans—
Gasping and choking for breath.

Baring their breasts to the robots,
Battering fists upon steel—
Charged day and night by new creatures—
Things that can't reason or feel.

Clashing with monsters of iron,
Beasts born of forge and of mill;
Making a stand to the utmost—
Armed but with courage and will.

Caught in the mechanized pincer—
Trapped in the Valley of Doom—
Doing their best in the horror.
There in the darkening gloom.

Heads up and never in panic—
True to the best in mankind—
Reeling and groggy and broken,
Bloody and battered and blind.

Left in the lurch by an ally—
Thrown to the wolves in a pinch;
Foodless, exhausted, yet never Destined to quiver or flinch.

Knowing the frightful disaster—
Sensing the terrible cost—
Cut down but never admitting
This is a war that is lost.

Backs to the wall, but intrepid—
Shrieking, "Come on! Do your stuff!"—
Making the enemy pay for Every last inch through the rough . . .

Sensing the trap getting narrow,
Watching 'em poise for the kill—
Fighting the fight of the gallant,
Clinging to culvert and hill.

Weary and famished and groggy—
Suffering tortures untold . . .
This the Lost Battle of Flanders?
Never while memories hold!

Peacetime Heroes Honored at Statue

While national attention centers on exploits in war, heroes of peacetime will be remembered at a memorial service Tuesday evening at the Titanic statue on Potomac parkway.

The service of persons who hazard their lives as policemen, firemen and missionaries will be praised at the service, which will start with a concert by the Police Boys Club Band at 6:30.

Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, will be principal speaker, and the Rev. George A. Ackerly, of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, will be chairman. This is one of numerous celebrations in various parts of the Nation near Memorial Day, in honor of peacetime heroes.

The Titanic statue was chosen as the cene for the service here because it was erected to the memory of men who died in the sinking of the ship, that women and children might be saved.

Sumner Welles Party Lures Diplomatic Set

Fair Weather Contributes to Success Of Gay Fete at the Oxon Hill, Md., Estate of Undersecretary and His Wife

The sun, which has been far too infrequent in its appearances this season, came out full force—by special order of the Hagerstown Almanac and a special prayer of Mrs. Sumner Welles—for the party which she and the Undersecretary of State gave yesterday afternoon at their estate in Oxon Hill, Md.

One of the loveliest places within driving distance of the Capital, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Welles is typically English. Nicely groomed lawns beckon guests to stroll within the clipped hedges and brick-walled garden, now a riot of blossoms. Up the long driveway yesterday rode a never ending stream of cars. The passengers admired the blooming shrubs on either side. Rhododendron, Laurel, roses and peonies added gay splashes of color to the scene.

By 5:30 o'clock a great many from the Diplomatic Corps and a scattering of official and cave dwellers had arrived. The Undersecretary and Mrs. Welles received on the terrace, joining their guests later in the lower garden that overlooks the Potomac. The tea table was set up not far fram the swimming pool—which Mrs. Wallace enjoys each morning. Again a variety of blossoms added a picturesque note to the affair.

A bevy of pretty ladies assisted the hostess throughout the afternoon. They included Mrs. Henry Robbins, of New York, a sister of Mr. Welles; Mme. Espil, whose black and blue figured frock was set off with a jaunty blue hat; Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mme. van Kaathoven.

Mrs. Robbins Assists at Party

The Diplomatic Corps seemed to be out in full force. To mention a few ranking ones seen in the crowd there were the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel Freyre y Santander; the French Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin, the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins; the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil, and the Italian Ambassador and Donna Elly Colonna.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, looking as soignee as ever, was telling friends that she plans to sail June 15 for South America. She has given up the home she leased here and does not plan to return to Washington until October. Others there included Mrs. Truxtun Beale, O. Max Gardner, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Pendelton Hogan, Decio de Moura, Dr. and Mrs. Breckenridge Bayne, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, and the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitich.

Many Diplomats In Gathering

The Charge d'Affaires of Germany and Frau Thomsen were among the throng which was representative of nearly every foreign nation except the Soviet. Miss Sibilla Skidelsky was there as were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolph Berle, the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom, the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy and Lady Chalkley, the Hungarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi, the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Loudon and the Misses Patten.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who will leave tomorrow for Schroon Lake, N. Y., were there as were the Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, the Minister of Latvia and Mme. Bilmanis, the Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard G. Casey, the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Boyd, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert.

On June 15, Mrs. Welles is planning a younger set garden party in honor of Miss Louise Stillwell.

Miss Huntington Home Wednesday

Miss Joanna Huntington, daughter of Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, will return to Washington from Smith College, in Northampton, Mass., Wednesday.

Miss Edith Huntington, who will graduate from Madeira School tomorrow and who will be a debutante of the coming season, will be in Washington with her family until June 21. At that time she will accompany her mother and sister to their country place, Journey's End, in the Blue Ridge overlooking Shenandoah Valley.

Miss Edith Huntington will make her debut on December 27 at the Chevy Chase Club at a joint party with Miss Peggy Burke, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Woolfolk Burke.

Although Miss Huntington will assist at many of the debutante functions this coming week, she will curtail her social activities after that to prepare for college entrance exams preparatory to entering Smith College next fall.

Jouett Shouses Hosts at Gay Farm Breakfast

Guests Plan Parts In 'Have-Fun-Carnival' To Be Held June 14

Something of the circus atmosphere prevailed at Wolf Trap Farm yesterday when Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse gathered in a congenial group for breakfast. The food was excellent and the conversation even better, reaching near hilarity as guests discussed their parts in the "Midway," the high spot of the Have Fun Carnival to be held at Wolf Trap the evening of June 14.

Mrs. Sydney Lee, who recently returned from Africa, startled the breakfasters by announcing that she would exhibit her two monkeys and a toucon—the latter being a rare bird. Her barkers will be Alexander Hagner, Arthur Bradley Campbell and Nelson Perrin.

Wolcott Waggaman brought sketches to the party of his part in the side show, to be entitled "Doggie's Dugout—Or a Bit of Old Paris." Mrs. Mondeu Gregg and Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller discussed plans for the "Taxi Dancers." Also up from Warrenton for the breakfast was Toni Carnelli, who plans to do charcoal sketches on the night of June 14. Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell attended the party. Mr. Caswell will be the announcer for the carnival.

Next Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Shouse will entertain at a breakfast party in honor of four debutantes of the season—Miss Elysabeth Barbour Miss Cynthia Dunn, Miss Sita Finkenssaedt and Miss Louise Stillwell.

Burgoo Supper Honors Byrons

Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron, of Maryland, will be guests of honor at a "Kentucky Burgooo" super to be given tonight at 6 o'clock by the Silver Spring Women's Democratic Club on the estate of Park Commissioner Lacy Shaw in Meadowood, Md., near Colesville.

More than 100 members of the club, their husbands and friends will attend the party, which will mark the close of the club's activities for the season. The "Kentucky Burgoo," to be the main course of the supper, will be prepared on an open fireplace. The concoction, made of chicken, meat and vegetables, is taken from an old recipe handed down in the family of Mrs. Ralph Wells, of Kentucky. Mrs. Wells is president of the Montgomery County Women's Democratic Club and is former president of the Silver Spring club.

Featuring the program will be the Byrons' band composed of Mr. Byron and his four sons, William D., jr., James Edgar, Goodloe and David. It will be the band wagon's first appearance in Montgomery County. There'll be community singing, readings by Mrs. Dorothy Shannon, a "Dr. I. Q." program, led by Francis Maloy. The program has been arranged by Mrs. E. Francis McDevitt as chairman.

The affair is strictly an invitation party.

Assisting Mrs. McDevitt are Mrs. Wells, Mrs. R. M. Poole, Mrs. Lauman T. Faulconer, Mrs. Paul Fox, Mrs. Willard Smallwood, Mrs. Calvin Schaeffer, Mrs. John L. Maddocks, Miss Alice Jones, Mrs. Donnell Shannon, Mrs. P. G. Morehouse, Mrs. Jackson Busby and Mrs. Louis Yost, sr.

In case of rain the supper will be held the following night.

Commencement Exercises to Be Held At Foxcroft School Today

FOXCROFT ESHOOL will hold its commencement exercises this afternoon in the garden of the school—weather permitting. The girls will march, all in white, to take their places facing Miss Charlotte H. Noland and the faculty. Among the 20 girls who will be graduated are some of the most prominent debutantes of the coming season—from all parts of the country. Following graduation exercises supper will be served on the lawn and porch of Brick House. Many of the parents will be among the guests of Miss Noland and the Foxcroft girls.

Mrs. Robert S. Pickens will entertain at a buffet luncheon on Wednesday at her home, Janelia, near Leesburg, for the many exhibitors who will be here for the Leesburg Garden Club Flower Show, to be held at Belmont, home of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley. Exhibitors will come from Winchester, Fairfax, Alexandria, Washington, Middleburg, The Plains, Warrenton, Purcellville and other places. They must have their flowers in place at the show by 11 a. m. Wednesday and may not remove them until the close of the show at 6 p. m. After placing their exhibits these people may play bridge, read or listen to the radio at Janelia. This is a new feature which the club is initiating this year in order to make the day a pleasant one for those who show their flowers.

MRS. ROBERT H. FLETCHER, JR., will give a luncheon on Wednesday in honor of the judges of the show. Among them are Mrs. Herbert H. Greger, of Washington, a professional teacher of Japanese flower arrangements. Mrs. Greger studied for many years in Japan where she received a teacher's diploma. To the Japanese, this is one of the highest honors and carries great prestige. Mrs. Greger is in great demand both as a lecturer and teacher. She will be assisted in judging some of the arrangement classes by Mrs. Robert Fleming and Miss Bernie, of Washington. Two landscape architects, Miss Carey Milholland and Miss Grace Campbell, of Washington, will be among those judging.

Two of Virginia's leading horticultural authorities, Mrs. W. W. Gibbs, of Staunton, who is in charge of the Rose Test Garden for the Garden Club of Virginia, and Miss Elizabeth Rawlinson, of Staunton, editor of Garden Gossip, will judge the specimen classes. Other judges include Mrs. Thomas Dudley, of Middleburg, and Mrs. Charles Baird, of Marshall.

AMONG THE many attractions at the flower show, one of the loveliest things will be a non-competitive horticultural exhibit of clematis, by Frank C. Littleton, of Oak Hill, near Aldie. Mr. Littleton, who is one of the country's leading authorities on clematis, has 125 varieties in his own garden.

Mrs. H. Rozier Dulany, arrived at Oakley, her Virginia home near Upperville, from Washington, on Saturday, where she will spend the summer. The whole neighborhood seems brighter and happier, when Mrs. Dulany comes home! Miss Juliet Dulany, of Washington, is staying at Oakley with her grandmother, Mrs. Dulany. Mr. and Mrs. H. Rozier Dulany, jr., spent the week-end there.

MR. AND MRS. H. NASH OGDEN, of New Orleans, have arrived to visit her aunt, Miss Marguerita Turner, at Westwood, near Middleburg. Mr. and Mrs. Ogden have been in New York for a week, where they attended the World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner Wiltshire and Mr. and Mrs. Crompton Smith, Middleburg, will return home from Richmond today, where they have been for the week-end. Mr. Wiltshire judged at the Deep Run Horse Show in Richmond on Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Duffey, jr., are being congratulated on the arrival of a son, born at Memorial Hospital, Winchester, last Tuesday. The young man has been named Harry Johnston Duffey 3d. Mrs. Duffey was formerly Miss Lois Salmon, daughter of Walter J. Salmon, of New York.

Frank Allens Hosts at Party In Arlingon

Cocktails and Buffet Supper Served With Weather Cooperating

With the weatherman on their side Maj. and Mrs. Frank Allen entertained at cocktails and a buffet supper on the terrace of their home last evening as they had planned. Maps, indicating just how to get to their place in Arlington, Va., were included in the invitation, so very few lost the way.

Mrs. Allen received her guests wearing a cream lace frock, which trailed the grass, caught at the neckline with two pearl clips. An impromptu bar had been set up opposite the small formal garden where roses and iris were in full bloom. Scarlet roses climbed over the picket fence. Tiny tables had been set up over the terrace and as darkness came the hurricane lamps were lit.

Assisting the hostess throughout the evening were Mrs. Lewellyn Oliver, Miss Rose Clark, Mrs. Ingeman, Miss Rehkopf, Mrs. Roy Williamson, Mrs. Samuel Sturgis, Mrs. Paul D. Sixteen Attend Breakfast Party In Keyes Home

Sixteen members of the young set attended the breakfast party given yesterday by Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes in her new home in Alexandria in honor of Debutante Ellen Flowerree, niece of Clarence Hewes.

The weather was a bit warm for Mrs. Keyes' famous New England baked beans and brown bread, and she treated her guests to a typical Southern breakfast instead. It started off with mint juleps—and ended up with strawberries in cream, fried chicken, Virginia ham, biscuits and pancakes. Mrs. Keyes received her young guests wearing a printed chiffon frock in a moonstone shade.

Mrs. Keyes, who moved into her Alexandria home on Cameron street in April, is planning two teas before the end of the spring season.

Miss Dart Honored At Garden Party

Miss Ann Dart, whose engagement to Arthur Darton was recently announced, was the guest of honor at a garden party Saturday night at which Dr. and Mrs. Nelson Horatio Darton were hosts.

During the evening about 150 guests toasted the young couple, who stood on the stone terrace outside the drawing room. The garden was gay with blooming flowers, Japanese lanterns strung between the trees, and hemlock hedges adorned with huge lover's bows of pink and blue.

The large refreshment table was set in the apex of the garden, with a Cupid centerpiece.

Mrs. Darton wore a lace gown of dusty pink and her daughter, Mrs. William James Kerlin, was in light blue. The guest of honor wore a trailing chiffon dress with a corsage of orchids.

Miss Dart lives in Richmond. Her wedding will take place at the Cathedral there late this month.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

DANCING UNDER the stars of Sidney's music . . . Japanese lanterns strung through the trees . . . an out-of-doors bar . . . the Grasslands clubhouse was just a place to leave your wraps at the Glovers' dance Saturday night. Though the house was beautifully decorated with flowers and the supper room always had its quota of guests, most people preferred to be part of the entrancing scene in the garden.

It was nice to see Mrs. Glover dancing again after a winter of mourning when she has been badly missed at parties. Young Nancy looked fresh as a daisy in filmy white—do you remember the daisies that she wore at her garden-party debut last year?—and Mr. Glover was tireless in seeing that everyone had a wonderful time.

Several dinners were given before the dance, among them being Stellita Stapleton's. Her guests included Dr. and Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, Ann Sperry, Angelica Lloyd in pale pink satin; Lieut. Fletcher Coles, George Renshard, and Joe de Lasa.

Horton Schoellkopf gave a large dinner in honor of Mrs. Hallett Johnson's attractive daughters, Katherine and Priscilla. As a guest said, "It was a wonderful dinner. Even the cakes played music."

Stunning Mrs. Warren Barbour was escorted at the Glovers' dance by Senator Barbour. She said that her florist, who will furnish the flowers for her daughter Elysabeth's debut dance next Saturday, is very heavy-hearted about the war. He wishes his flowers to contribute in some way to relief work in Europe. Therefore he will give to the Red Cross 50 cents out of his own pocket for every $2 spent on the Barbours' flowers, and he will do the same for any other debutante hostess who requests it.

SITTING OUT or whirling gayly at the Glovers' party were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt and dark-eyed Sita, Mrs. David Key, whose husband has recently been transferred from Canada to the U. S. Embassy in Rome; the newly appointed Minister to Canada and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat; Mr. and Mrs. Derek Hoyer Millar—she is Carol Glover's niece; the Peruvian Ambassador, the Spanish Ambassador, the Hungarian Minister, Capt. Paul Bastedo; F. Lamont Belin, Gen. and Mrs. Louis Little, up from Quantico; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Cortesi, Mrs. Arthur Woods, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, in a fascinating black dress made entirely of little ruffles; Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and Ivy Bacon.

Also the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wennerberg, Donna Julia Brambilla, Eugene Meyer and his good-looking daughter, Katherine; Count and Countess Lasochi, Sen. Cabot Lodge, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Du Bose, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chapell.

Others were Mrs. Anthony Rumbold in black and white, Mrs. George Howe with her niece, Dora Redway; Mrs. Anthony Celeby in pale blue, Mary Lou Marsh, Maisie Howard in turquoise crepe, Sheila Broderick, Lady Maureen Noel with Archduke Felix of Austria, Zeva Fish, Louise Stillwell, Jane Eustis and her fiance, George Wheeler; Nancy Leiter, Mary Wright, Eleanor Flood and Peggy Townsend.

Still others were Deborah and Marian Kirk, Count Fumisone-Biondi, Robert Stead, John Foster, just returned from a trip to Mexico; Elvin Seibert, Joseph Alsop, Winthrop Crane, Samuel Reber, Llewellyn Thompson, Robert Whitman and scores more.

AN AMUSING IMPROMPTU feature of the birthday party which Mrs. Harry Woodring gave for her distinguished husband was an auction for the benefit of the Red Cross. Secretary Woodring had received a number of interesting looking birthday packages which he placed unopened on the mantel to await a lull in his duties as host.

After dinner someone suggested that the intriguing parcels should be auctioned for the Red Cross fund. This seemed a bit unkind to a man on his birthday. So a compromise was reached whereby the right to open each package and to read aloud the accompanying card went to the highest bidder, while the present itself remained the property of Mr. Woodring.

In record time, and at a good price, the gifts came tumbling out of their wrappings. Military equipment from the Five and Ten, a workman's cap, gloves and red cotton handkerchief, gay neckties and books, both serious and frivolous, were some of the objects disclosed. After the auction the guests put on some stunts, the stars of the occasion being Mrs. Thurman Arnold and Mrs. Jay Hayden.

OTHERS PRESENT on this occasion were the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Louis Johnson, Admiral and Mrs. Leahy—he is now Governor of Puerto Rico—Gen. and Mrs. George Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Foote, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Duke Shoop, Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Waltman, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. James L. Wright.

Ann McPhee Is Bride Here

The marriage of Miss Ann Jeanette McPhee and Robert Lewis Hutchinson took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Sixteenth street apartment of the bride's aunt, Mrs. John Bittinger Wright. The Rev. David O'Dwyer officiated. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daniel McPhee, jr., of Santa Fe. Mrs. McPhee came here for the ceremony. The parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hutchinson, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., flew here to attend the wedding.

The bride wore an afternoon frock of light blue with a matching hat. She had as her attendants Miss Betty Wright, who wore a pink frock, and Miss Ann Wright, who served as flower girl. She too was gowned in pink.

Charles McPhee Wright served as best man. Master John Wright was ring bearer.

Mrs. Wright played the harp throughout the ceremony. After the wedding the couple left for a honeymoon trip. They will make their home in Indianapolis.

The bride attended Manhattan College, New York City, and later was graduated from the Kent School of Denver. She is a member of the Denver Junior League. Mr. Hutchinson was graduated from Harvard University and studied law in the University of Arizona.

Byrnes, jr., Representative and Mrs. Estes Kefauver and Representative and Mrs. Albert Gore.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Old School Friend, a Bachelor, Fails to Acknowledge Woman's "Thank-You" Note and Also a Business Communication; Should She Write a Third Time?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Ten years ago I was a graduate student in a large university. There I associated with a group of 16 or more students, both men and women. In that group was one very promising man to whom all the girls were attracted. He didn't interest me particularly, although I thought him a man of excellent qualities.

During the years since, most members of the group have married and scattered to the four corners of the earth. There remain unmarried the man aforementioned (still living in that university city) and several of the women, who visit that city frequently, by the way. They make it a practice, when in town, to telephone this bachelor. This I have seldom done, although I have run into him two or three times by chance. He always asked why I hadn't called him.

Two months ago I wrote him of my approaching visit to his city. He not only took me to dinner the evening I arrived, but we visited mutual friends the other two evenings of my stay. On the last evening, when we were out driving in my car, we had a minor accident. It was entirely the fault of the other driver. As this man was in a position to collect damages, he was very insistent that I turn the bill over to him for collection—after I had returned home and had the car repaired.

So, after I had been home for a few days, I wrote him a note saying I had enjoyed my visit in the city and gave him a cordial invitation to visit my home some week-end. A week later, after the car had been repaired, I sent him a receipted bill, as he had urged me to do. Almost two months have passed and I have not heard one word.

Was I wrong in sending the bill? Should I write him saying that I hope he has not been inconvenienced at having to try to collect the small amount and telling him not to bother any more about it? Or would it be better not to write? We have always been good friends and I don't want him to think I have matrimonial designs on him—as I haven't.

However, when I am in the city again, should I call him? If I don't call him, he will be sure to hear from mutual friends that I have been there, and I am planning to make another visit some time in June. I will greatly appreciate an early reply through your column. M. F. D.

Clear the Atmosphere At Next Meeting

DEAR M. F. D.: Since you will be in the man's immediate vicinity very soon, I think you should omit further correspondence and clear the atmosphere in a first-hand discussion. When you have arrived for your visit, telephone him for the double purpose of saying "hello," and of urging him "not to bother" any more about pressing collection of the bill.

Say that since you haven't heard from him about it, you figure it must have given him some trouble, and therefore, on second thought, you are sorry you wished such a chore off on him, in spite of the fact that he "asked for it." And with amiable obstinacy, take the matter out of his hands. Don't let him gallantly (and perhaps insincerely) overpersuade you again. If he asks to see you during the visit, let him come, and treat him with the casual friendliness that has always marked your interchange.

He has been rude in letting two months pass without acknowledging either of your notes. But it isn't worthwhile, in my opinion, to make an "incident" of his omission by behaving in a stiff-necked manner toward him in future. By telephoning him in a matter of course way, as suggested, you will be robbing the episode of any supposed significance, so far as you are concerned. But thereafter leave all "first moves" (if any) up to him. M. H.

Pointers on Thrift For 'Shoestring' Brides

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I should like to suggest a compromise to the young couple who asked your advice as to whether they should marry now and live with rented furniture, or postpone marriage until they have bought the furniture they really want. Several young couples I know have furnished really charming apartments on the financial "shoestring" which this bride-to-be mentions. For money, they substituted imagination, a good sense of line and color, and willingness to work.

Their first home usually centered around a bed-living room arrangement. Either a studio couch or two army cots solved the bed-by-night, divan-by-day problem. If cots had to do, they were given pretty covers of chintz, monk's cloth or something of the sort, plus gay cushions. One girl got an attractive coffee table and bookshelves of unpainted wood for a total of about $3 and waxed them until they gleamed like "blond wood." (They could have been painted.)

Second-hand stores, carefully searched, yielded a chest of drawers, an old mirror and some straight wooden chairs of simple, sturdy design. Given two coats of paint in soft bright colors and gay cushions tied on, they were delightful to see and comfortable to use. A nice old walnut table was found, for $6, and rubbed with oil and wax until it shone. (Another girl used a heavy card table for dining. Between meals it supported a lamp and a bowl of flowers).

Inexpensive chintz was a favor- favorite for curtains, although one bride used unbleached muslin to extremely good effect. Felt or jute rugs solved the carpeting problem. With a few colored prints on the walls, the usual wedding gifts and some cut flowers, the interiors I knew became cozy and attractive.

It is just as much fun furnishing an apartment in this way as it is to go out and buy a complete "set" of furniture—and often much wiser. It takes much time and throught as well as money to find furniture that will be a joy throughout the years. Indeed, I have observed that young persons who love each other seem to enjoy sharing this kind of home making experience. Their modest creation seems to mean more to them than any ready-made set-up ever could . . . Sincerely,
ONE WHO TRIED IT.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Budget For Beauty

A limited budget is a lame excuse for a dowdy appearance. Any woman can be cosmetically well-groomed on a small amount if she is willing to ferret out cosmetic bargains.

One resourceful trick is to watch for special promotions in stores or turn-of-the-season sales. Another is to take advantage of salon specialities, offered to increase good will or to advertise services. Virtually all the large cosmetic firms run half price sales on their products at least once a year. Then too there are many excellent beauty preparations that are inexpensively priced right from the start. Two items in this low cost group are a make-up bag, and dental stain remover to beautify the teeth.

Serving as both a fashion and a beauty accessory are a number of smart chantung bags made up in a bright galaxy of fashion shades, each a color key to the make-up it contains. The French coutourier, who designed both the make-up and bags, stocks the case with lipstick, powder, rogue and a full-fledged powder puff.

The new strain remover for the teeth is a chalky white stick, menthol flavored, intended to erase loose tarter and discolorations made by lactic acid and nicotine. Dampened and rubbed on each tooth, after your dentrifice has done its job, this stick adds the finishing touches to the teeth.

'How Does Your Garden Grow?'— That May Depend On the Togs You Wear

GARDENING produces probably more "wrong" fashions than any semi-strenuous sport. A case in point is the blonde at left who looks as if she were dressed merely to smell sweet posies, not to seed or weed them. Her Follies picture hat with its pussy-cat bow would never stay put, and her dressy shirred gloves look more appropriate for garden parties than garden chores.

BLUE DENIMS, the ideal work clothes for rooftop or country gardening, are shown at right. These blue and white overalls have bib front, deep patch pockets and adjustable draw-string back. The red flannel pullover and elasticized red wedges conform to every stoop and bend of the rake.

Balanced Diet Will Aid Appetite, Replace Angles With Curves

Thin Girls, Usually Too Busy to Eat Properly, Suffer in Looks and Strength; Should Select Proper Foods for Vitamins and Calories

By Ida Jean Kain

WHETHER you have it or lack it, appetite is very apt to be the underlying cause of your weight problem. But if the overweight, the one who craves food practically all the time, could only step into the too thin girl's shoes for a day, she might discover that it can be harder to eat than to diet!

There are some who are underweight simply because they are too busy—or believe they are—to pay proper attention to meal hours and to food in general. If you are one of these preoccupied thin girls, you will have to acquire more respect for food. You can't afford to miss a meal or to delay it too long. And if you have been in the habit of dashing off to work with only a sip of coffee and a bite of toast for breakfast, you'll have to stop it. To you, breakfast is a highly important meal—it's your chance to take on one-third of the calories you need for energy during the day!

Poor Appetite Unnatural

But the majority of you underweights realize how important food is to you and you do everything in your power to gain. The trouble is you can't force yourselves to eat. A recent letter from a thin girl states that she doesn't even like food and has no appetite, but that she is acutely embarrassed about her thinness and is willing to do anything to gain. She promises:

"If you will just send me a gaining diet, I'll eat every last thing on it if I have to choke it down!"

She has the right attitude. But, since appetite is the promise to take care of food, there's not much use in choking it down! In this instance, the first step is to find out the reason for the appetite.

Food habits themselves may be at fault. Anyone who eats too little runs a risk of getting far too little Vitamin B. This is the appetite vitamin. It is also the vitamin which contributes to good muscle tone, to a healthy nervous system, and which participates in the liberation of energy. All these factors may be tied up in the underweight's problem.

Foods rich in Vitamin B1 are: Whole grains, yeast, yeast products, wheat germ, whole wheat bread, liver, kidney beans and peas. Other good sources are milk, leafy vegetables, fruits and eggs. In other words, a well balanced diet tends to develop a normal appetite!

Rest Helpful

In many cases, the use of B1 in the form of thiamin chloride is successful in promoting a normal appetite. Ask your doctor about it.

When you are too tired to eat, you not only eat less but you assimilate less and it may be that the solution for you is to rest more. It is an excellent plan to rest before eating whenever possible.

Exercise also has its place, and an important one, in the weight-gaining plan. A normal amount of exercise makes for a better circulation, better digestion and better assimilation. They add up to a healthier body. That doesn't mean that you should attempt exercise beyond your strength. Stick to the mild variety and, if possible, take it outdoors in the fresh air, allowing plenty of rest afterwards.

Weight-Gain Precepts

Here are three rules which the underweight should live by until she has gained the desired weight: First, never hurry, for that produces an increasing amount of tension. Second, take enough time to eat three good meals a day. Third, spend some part of every day out of doors.

Desserts With a Difference

MANY is the time that something "different" for dessert has turned a dull dinner into a meal that was memorable. Butterscotch Fluff is a concoction both delicious and thrifty, for it is made with bread crumbs. It is nutritious, too, with the eggs and milk used in making it.

If your family likes butterscotch flavor, this is one that will call for repeats. And the recipe given for Rhubarb Minerettes also makes a successful dessert.

Butterscotch Fluff

Melt 3 tablespoons butter, add 1 cup brown sugar and cook very slowly, stirring until sugar is melted. Pour in 1 quart scalded milk, and stir until blended. Add 2 cups soft bread crumbs and allow to cool slightly. Combine with 3 slightly beaten eggs, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Arrange 1 cup marshmallows in bottom of buttered baking dish and pour in mixture. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 1 hour. Serves 6.

Rhubarb Minerettes

Brown 2 cups soft breadcrumbs in 2 tablespoons butter. Grease 6 individual custard cups, and arrange alternate layers of crumbs and 2 cups sweetened cooked rhubarb in each cup. Cover tops with meringue made of 2 beaten egg whites and 2 tablespoons sugar. Bake in slow oven, 325 degrees, until meringue browns. Serves 6.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Can Women Drink Better Than Men? But No—Definitely

Painful though it is, I feel it my duty to record the latest minor chapter in that sad saga of ladies going up against the innocent-looking giant, Alcohol, in all its superficially delightful forms. A test was made here the other day, with men and women as guinea pigs, which purported to prove that the girls held and balanced their tipples better than the "other" sex.

ALICE HUGHES

After wide observation, I tend to doubt this, except in occasional cases involving women with hollow legs. But this experiment was performed with a drinkometer, by which the victim blows her tainted breath into a toy balloon, the contents of which are then passed through an intricate series of acids, and something is proven, perhaps. At any rate, it is now said that three strong drinks are enough to make their absorber unfit to pilot a car, and that the most potent drinks are, in order, rum, gin, Scotch, rye, brandy. This fooled me. I'd have placed rye first without a struggle, but it may be an idiosyncrasy. And that fatties, as a general thing, can stand more alcohol than leanies.

The men feel, almost unanimously, that girls, owing to delicate differences in their organisms, are peculiarly unstable and difficult tipplers. When corned, they tend to babble, lose their moral stability to the point of giving the rolling eye to total strangers, and otherwise demolish the peace of an otherwise placid and respectable saloon. The man who leads a pretty creature to strong drink is taking a desperate chance.

Since I am practically a white ribbon girl, barring a sip of vermouth or sherry and hence observant of my imbibing sisters, I object on other grounds. Women at the bottle tend to lose not only their womanly dignity and charm, but actually to fall apart physically. Their hair straggles after No. 3, their faces become loose and out of drawing, and often they end by looking like a dime's worth of gawdhelpus.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The following column, published more than a year ago, and having particular timeliness at present, is reprinted at request of readers.

The Lost Chord

THE "BIG NAVY" man was almost apoplectic in his indignation. "This is what the pacifists have brought us to," he exclaimed, "Why—why we haven't even the navy yards to build ships enough! And then blowing up the Washington in 1924! A perfectly good, new $45,000,000 battleship!"

She could not forget his words. Was there—could there have been a day when the world was safe enough for this Nation, for any nation, to sink its own armaments? And now . . .

IT CONTINUED to haunt her, this sinking of the Washington. While now it had become only a vague memory, yet she knew that all the peace societies and all the women's clubs had hailed the gesture as the dawn of a new era of reason, harmony, security. And everyone reading the news had immediately felt assured, happy, safe. This was the tangible fruit of the Disarmament Conference that two and a half years earlier had met with such valiant hopes in Washington. This was the end of wars—the beginning of peace.

WHAT COULD it have been like, anyway, that vague and distant world of 1924? No newsboys raucously calling headlines that made one flinch. No ominous voices coming over the radio. No sense of fear . . . of helplessness, of waiting . . . waiting . . .

She was seized with a sudden nostalgia for this past, a sudden curiosity concerning it. Well, at least she could escape into it, sense its tranquility for even a few minutes, she thought, as she turned the yellowing pages of the old newspapers. Ah—there it was! November 25, 1924, with its morning-after chronicles of what had been a day of brightest hope and promise in Washington.

What was in the big front page picture? Mrs. Coolidge, a mass of flowers at her belt, and in the background the long, graceful new dirigible, the Los Angeles that she had just christened. "DEDICATED TO PEACE," the headline said. The text added: "Built for nonmilitary purposes under the treaty with Germany."

At the conclusion of the christening a flock of white pigeons had been released, and had flown away carrying this message: "And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the Heavenly host praising God and saying 'Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will to men.'"

ANOTHER heading caught her attention: "WASHINGTON SUNK BY GUNFIRE OF THE TEXAS." The nearly completed battleship, related the story, had been sent to the bottom of the ocean off the Virginia Capes "at 10:58 yesterday morning," in fulfillment of the Washington treaty for limitation of naval armament. And around 5 o'clock in the afternoon the newly christened Los Angeles had soared away from the Naval Air Station at Anacostia to its career of "peaceful pursuits."

That had been on Tuesday, two days before Thanksgiving, she reflected. The tang of winter must have been in the air, and the brown oak leaves rattling on their branches, and the sun sinking early and far to the southward behind the forests across the Potomac. And everyone must have been full of plans for Thanksgiving . . . and carrying lilting thoughts of Christmas which was just around the corner . . . and wondering whether or not it was going to be a cold winter, and if times would keep on getting better.

YES, SHE THOUGHT, as she turned the pages of the dingy paper, it had been a world of small and safe concerns compared with that of today. Charlie Chaplin had just married his leading lady, Lita Grey. Sir Esme Howard and Col. George Harvey had spoken in a test to span the sea by radio. Leonard Kip Rhinelander had filed suit to annul his marriage. A Florida man had won a countess as a mail order bride. Nora Bayes was at a local theater. Women were wearing hats like helmets bashed down over their eyes, collarless dresses that hung on them like flower sacks with belts at the hipline, and skirts so tight at the bottom they revealed their legs to the knee when they boarded street cars.

That was the world that was so safe that a battleship could be sunk!

And now more must be built. It was puzzling. Had everyone really been too naive before? . . . "Force is the only power!" the dictators kept thundering. And apparently the only answer to them was in terms of their own "blood and iron."

And yet . . . well, might it not have been some something merely to have had the vision of peace? "Without vision a people perish." What would life have been like today without vision—the vision of artists, of philosophers, of industrialists, of scientists? No, the high hopes of 1924 were not lost. They would always be remembered as something "seen in part" of more perfect things to come.

Make New Rugs With Old Scraps

PRETTY—and so "homey" in your room—is oval braided rug combining a flowered pattern with solid colors.

Use perhaps an old printed cotton dress for the flowered part, then have your plain colors harmonize. Shades of green look lovely with a pink and cream design.

The rug is 23 by 33 inches and requires about 16 yards of material—which you cut into strips 3½ inches in width and not longer than about 1½ yards. Before braiding, turn in raw edges of strips ½ inch, press down, and fold strips through center.

In making a braid, use 3 strips of the same color. Pin together, fasten to table and braid, folding again through the center. Make braid with firm, straight edges. As strips run short, sew on new ones, spacing the joinings to avoid lumpiness.

Now, to shape your rug, measure 20 inches on braid of figured material, fold in half and sew edges together. This makes the rug's center and you proceed to wind braid around this center—sewing as you go and keeping your work flat.

Effective to add about 2 yards of figured braid to the center before changing to a plain fabric. When ending a color slope braid at one end of work. Start new color at other end.

You'll enjoy, too, making a colorful hooked rug for your living room or a gay crocheted stocking rug for your bedroom.

Our 40-page booklet, "New Ideas for Handmade Rugs," gives complete directions for making many styles of hooked, braided, woven and crocheted rugs. Includes a tufted candlewick rug, an Oriental pile rug—to name only a few.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "New Ideas for Handmade Rugs," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Union Rejects G. M. C. Offer, Asks U. S. Aid

Federal Intercession For 'Equitable' Accord Urged of Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 2.—The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers today rejected counterproposals for a revised agreement with General Motors Corporation and asked the Federal Government to intervne in arranging for an "equitable" settlement.

President R. J. Thomas said the union's General Motors council termed corporation proposals "inadequate" and added local unions would be instructed to reject them. The council received the corporation's proposals yesterday.

An agrement would have affected some 135,000 employes in 52 corporation plants in which the union won bargaining elections conducted by the National Labor Relations Board.

In a telegram to President Roosevelt, requesting immediate Federal intercession in the dispute, Thomas said a settlement should be "delayed no longer lest vital interests of workers be sacrificed."

Thomas also said local unions would be asked to empower the council's executive committee and international officers to take "whatever action they may deem necessary" in concluding a "satisfactory" contract.

A spokesman for the General Motors Corporation said any comment on the union's statement would await study of it by corporation officials.

First Holy Names Academy Class Is Graduated

Europe's war-torn condition indicates what happens when man is substituted for God, the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington, told the first graduating class of the Academy of the Holy Names, Silver Spring, Md., at commencement exercises yesterday at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church, of which Bishop McNamara is pastor.

"Force takes the place of love and man descends from the mountain tops to the pits," the speaker said. "This, I believe, can be proved if one could interview the men of the war-scarred countries, or better still—talk with the women," he said.

The exercises were concluded with solemn benediction at which Bishop McNamara was celebrant, with the Rev. Thomas Calnan, pastor of St. Michael's Church, Silver Spring, as deacon, and the Rev. Thomas Becker, S. J., of St. Aloysius' Church, as subdeacon.

The procession of 24 graduates was led by two flower girls, Ruth O'Brien and Doris DeNeane.

Likens It to Her Husband's Invention, a Light Amid Despair

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, June 2.—Praise for the moral rearmament movement, sponsoring a week's program here, was voiced at a West Coast Pioneer's meeting today by Mrs. Mina Edison Hughes, mother of Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison.

Mrs. Hughes spoke of the work of her late husband, Thomas A. Edison, the inventor.

"He spent seven long, patient years perfecting the electric bulb," she said, "and now in the darkest corners of the earth even primitive men see at night because that light has been multiplied and made available for all.

"Now in the darkness of the world's confusion and despair, the light of moral rearmament is multiplying faith in millions of hearts and making God's guidance available to the average man, woman and child all over the world."

Other speakers included Mrs. John Henry Hammond, New York social and civic leader, and Mrs. Charles L. Slattery, personal representative of the Mayor of Boston.

U. S. Pay Cuts Will Save Only 1%, Employes Say

By Edward Ryan

Savings in Federal employe salaries under the 10 per cent economy program proposed by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, would clip Government expenses by less than 1 per cent, officials estimated.

Senator Byrd's plan would seek to reduce by 10 per cent all Government expenses except those for national defense, fixed charges and refunds for receipts, and a few others, like the social security program and railroad retirement.

James Burns, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, cited the economy measures of 1933 and "the attendant hardships visited on Government employes."

Cites Pay Cuts' Perils

Burns said that it would be "unwise and unfortunate if in this emergency any measure should be adopted, or even seriously considered, which would slash salaries of people whose morale and services are vital to defense."

He said that if all Government employes were discharged overnight the heaviest expenses of the Government program would be left untouched.

Senator Byrd's proposal did not mention salaries or specify that a 10 per cent reduction of expenses outside defense and fixed charges would mean a 10 per cent payroll cut.

Would Save 8 Per Cent

It was pointed out, however, that matching payroll reductions with over-all expense cuts would bring the employes' share in the economy drive to about 8 per cent of the Government's expense. The estimates cited a study by Labor Department and Civil Service statisticians.

The latter report, based on 1939 expenses, said that the employe payroll for all Federal activities outside national defense was 8.3 per cent of the total Government expenditures, or $769,800,000.

Buried under the flood of defense work in the Senate last week was a unique proposal for saving the Nation. It was in process of being turned down.

Offered Wealth to U. S.

The plan, offered two years ago, came from a Michigan woman who deeded over to the Government of the United States, Washington, D. C., her 40 acres of land. She said it contained enough gold, diamonds and oil to pay off the national debt many times over. She kept only a life interest, but offered to exchange that for a $4,000 annual pension.

The record of her offer, and the Government's response was spread on the pages of a joint resolution, to clear the title to her land.

It showed that the Treasury had given attention to the matters involved, and that in view of a number of legal and practical questions the conclusion had been reached that it would not be advisable to accept conveyance of the property in question at that time. The Congressional resolution pointed out that the United States has no interest in the premises and that the woman should receive again the title to her 40 acres.

Federal Security Administrator McNutt and Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker have issued a round of applause for a "history-making" ruling by the Federal Communications Commission which opened a new type of staticless broadcasting for educational use.

Aid to Education

It came as their radio division was preparing to close down by June 30.

The FCC ruling opened five channels for the "frequency modulation" type of broadcasting to be used for educational stations. McNutt said the ruling may "provide the greatest stimulus to education our Nation has yet experienced." Studebaker said it would "have a deep-rooted and fundamental effect on our people."

Studebaker explained the plan would permit developing up to 3,000 local broadcasting stations for schools, colleges and educational groups. They could be used, he said, in broadcasting lessons to classrooms, in adult education work, and in teaching shut-in students.

Funny paper characters occasionally reach the same place at the same time. Joe Palooka and Chief Wahoo, for example, both get to Hollywood, and never meet. And maybe Jane Arden is there too.

Just Won't Mix

This sad inability to mix two or more worlds is now apparent in Government drama circles.

Thursday, the Patent Office Players will present their three-act newspaper comedy, "Hot Copy," at 8:15 p. m., in the Commerce Auditorium.

The next two nights, Agriculture Players will show "The Thirteenth Chair" at 8:30 p. m., in the Agriculture Auditorium.

The situation, briefly, is impossible. The Patent Office newsmen will have their play one day too early and ever find the big story. And Agriculture's murderer, unharassed by ace reporters, is likely to go scot free.

Baccalaureate Speakers Urge Students to Uphold Democracy

American U., Madeira And Dunbarton Hold Baccalaureate Rites

The gravity of the international situation puts a solemn responsibility on this year's graduates to keep aloft in America spiritual values that are being challenged in Europe, speakers said at baccalaureate services of schools in and near Washington yesterday.

Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University, at its service in Metropolitan Memorial Church, instructed the graduates:

"Your commitment to truth will involve you in the service you must render your generation if the new Dark Ages hovering so low over Europe are not to settle down upon the world. You must lift again the ethical ideals that create and sustain Christian culture, civilization and Democracy against the paganism which repudiates the moralities . . . and the decencies which distinguish disciplined human life from that of the beast."

"Without the great Christian virtues of mercy, truth and honor, there can be no Democracy, no civilization, and no genuine culture," he said.

"You will not have to die for them. Other young men are dying for them now . . . which is the trouble with this dying for great ideals; it has always to be done over. You will not have to die for them, but you will have to live for them," Dr. Gray said.

"In a catastrophic world, culture and education must expose and fight against the lies by which the world is so much betrayed—the lie against Democracy, the lie against history, the lie against humanity. Distinguishing truth from falsehood is no easy task."

He pointed out that "one of the functions of culture in a catastrophic world" is to safeguard the rights and exercise the responsibilities of Democracy.

"Your education will prove itself in protest and resistance, as it calls government to accou t for every denial of those rights, every perversion of those responsibilities. Only by exercising your right to call government to account will you preserve for those who follow you the freedom you have received," Dr. Gray declared.

Dr Hart Speaks

Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's Church, told the graduates of the Madeira School in Fairfax County at the senior vesper service yesterday afternoon:

"The greatest service we can render to our country in a troubled world and in a dark hour is just a day-to-day working at democracy, to make it work.

"It is our duty, when things are at their worst, to be at our best," he said, speaking on "Religion as a Way of Life."

"The ordinary affairs of life are the only means given to us in which to glorify God," he said, pointing out that the Christian life elevates a person's occupation so it "becomes a worthy vocation in which we strive to do the will of God."

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, spoke on "The Rendezvous with Life" at the baccalaureate service at National Park College, Forest Glen, Md., yesterday afternoon.

He said that while armies of Europe are keeping a rendezvous with death, "we must keep a rendezvous with life." He spoke of the danger of persons going through life and "missing its meaning."

Dr. J. M. Campbell, dean of the undergraduate college at Catholic University and chaplain of Dunbarton College, celebrated mass and gave the sermon at Dunbarton's baccalaureate service yesterday. He stressed the fact that a graduate owes a debt to the college and to the society that supports it, and that tuition is only a token payment.

Dr. J. Gillespie Armstrong, rector of Christ Church, Georgetown, spoke on "Friendship" at the service at Mount Vernon Seminary yesterday afternoon, stressing the importance of cultivating friendships.

Trinity Exercises

The Rev. Edward F. Talbot, O. M. I., Ph. D., spoke to the graduating class of Trinity College in the chapel following a pontificial high mass at 10:30 a. m. yesterday. His sermon emphasized the effect of Catholic education in training the girls' intellects and wills in their preparation for living, instead of merely for "making a living." He also declared it fitting that the class pay tribute to God on the Sunday before their graduation.

Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Herbert LeBlond, bishop of St. Joseph, Mo., with the Rev. Dr. Russell as deacon, the Rev. Dr. Cassidy as subdeacon, and the Rev. Dr. Roelker, as master of ceremonies.

Howard Services

Faith in the common man as the foundation of civilization was the theme of the baccalaureate address delivered yesterday at Howard University by Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president, before an audience of more than 4,000 person seated on the campus fronting Douglass Hall.

He called upon members of the graduating classes never to cease agitating until they brought to life a system that will develop "men with the God-given dignity of manhood, though green from the earth, though born of a slave, yet able, honorable, self-respectable and competent to hold their place in the eyes of all mankind."

"The trouble with democracy," Dr. Johnson said, "is that she last lost her soul. She is repudiated because she is neither hot nor cold, and no one can tell where she stands. The need of the Nation is not for regimentation of an ordered society, but for the development of manhood of the common variety, which will never be daunted in making its way in the world."

U.S. in Danger On 3 Fronts, Pastors Say

Defense Preparations Held Necessary Materially, Physically And Spiritually

Warning that America must prepare materially, physically and spiritually for defense was heard in Washington churches yesterday.

At the request of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the Methodist Church, Northern Baptist Convention, Southern Presbyterian General Assembly and other bodies, worshipers prayed for suffering spiritual neighbors abroad, and gave generously to war relief.

Dr. E. B. Wilcox, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, told his congregation that Europe's fate "can happen here" and said it may even now be too late to ward off disaster.

Stating that his views were prompted by cold reasoning, and not by hysteria, the clergyman contended that America is only slightly better prepared materially than in '17, and would be an easy target for invasion if the Allies' are defeated.

Asking his listeners to face the facts realistically, Dr. Wilcox said the force with which America is now contending is that "of immoral brutes and beasts in the extreme."

Blaming America, in part, for the present crisis, he said that following the first World War, when we should have been exercising our influential power, we acted "like priests and Levites on the Jericho road" who ignored the dying wayfarer.

Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, addressing his Grace Luthern congregation, defined the cause of the war as arising from "a lack of good will" and "lack of religion in men's souls."

"In Russia religion has been strangled by official decree," said he. "In Germany both Protestant and Catholic branches of the church have become subservient to the Fuehrer.

"In France, England and the United States we have a lot of piously patriotic people who indict Russia and Germany for religious intolerance but who themselves make religion ineffectual by their complete indifference to its practice. These have been the ideal conditions for putting good will aside and letting hatred and war come in."

Contending that the world has tried too many short cuts to peace through treaties and peace conferences, Dr. Lenski insisted "it has veered away from the more difficult task of visiting so much of good on its enemies that the enemies have been compelled at last to lay their weapons down and to respond in a like spirit of kindness."

Unless America regains its sense of moral obligation, it will soon be witnessing Europe's fate, the Right Rev. Msgr. C. Barry O'Toole, Ph. D., S. T. D., declared at yesterday's Catholic Evidence Guild service in Franklin Park.

"If America does not wish to bring upon herself the catastrophe Europe is now experiencing, there is only one thing for her to do," he asserted, "and that is to repent of her irreligion.

"If she fails to do that, neither armaments nor her political institutions will save her. Without a common standard of what constitutes business, social and private honor and honesty, we are well on our way toward the acceptance and application of force—either by the dictatorship of mere numbers or that same thing under the dictatorship of one man."

Preaching from the pulpit of Union Methodist Church, Dr. John R. Edwards expressed hope that youth will be able to accomplish more toward world peace than its elders.

"In world affairs, the older generation has not been successful nor in the main, wise. We believe youth will find a better way through unselfish planning and world-wide training, where ethics in realms of justice, right race relationships and religious unity shall accomplish what war can never do."

Urging an adequate military defense for America, Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, said:

"This is a time to forget all differences, and see that Hitler does not win in this struggle. If he does, the America we love is lost and gone. There can be no comprimise with what civilization is fighting today."

The Rev. Charles Enders, spiritual leader of the Concordia Evangelical Lutheran Church, warned that America does not only need spiritual and material defenses, but also "needs to prepare itself to help restore the people of a devastated Europe to normal life and to peaceful relationships among themselves after the war."

While no accurate estimate of war relief funds was available, it was said to have totaled several thousand dollars, and will be sent to either denominational agencies or to the Committee on Foreign Relief Appeals in New York City for distribution.

Dondero Urges Youth Uphold Nation, Faith

Prepare to Shoulder Debt of Present War, He Tells Groups

Representative George A. Dondero (Republican), of Michigan, last night urged youths of Reformation Lutheran Church to reconsecrate themselves to religious and patriotic duties.

"We can best discharge our American and Christian responsibilities," the legislator told a joint gathering of the Luther Leagues and Round-table organizations, "by remaining steadfast, true and loyal, not only to our Government and our country, but to our Christian faith and principles."

Later in his message, he said he was fully aware that on the rising generation "will fall the tremendous burden of debt and the cost resulting from this Godless and most devastating era in the history of this world."

"That you will meet that responsibility, I have no fear," he assured. "The generations before you and me have done so. Out of that sacrifice and loyalty to a Nation has come a country and a Government which now stands almost alone, of all the nations on the globe, in its steadfastness to Christian faith, liberty and 'equal justice under law.'

"Committed to that faith, it is the silent prayer of millions of people from this troubled day with our faith unshaken and our devotion to Christian principles undiminished."

20-Pound Carp Amuses Hundreds At Tidal Basin

James E. Shea, jr., 15, of 49 W street northwest, fishing from a concrete abutment near the Tidal Basin boathouse, played the fish for 30 minutes after it had been hooked by his mother with a light rod and reel. While bicyclists and others gathered, young Shea brought the carp within arm's reach only to see his prize escape with the hook in its mouth.

The fish was described as weighing from 15 to 20 pounds. Boathouse concessionaires said carp this size are frequently caught in the basin.

Fire Fighters, Police Mark Father's Day

Enthusiasm Needed In Family Life, Chaplain Declares

Religion, prayers and a spirit of enthusiasm about family life, are the greatest needs of the modern home, the Rev. Hirl Kester said yesterday at the first annual Father's Day celebration of the Protestant Police and Firemen's Association.

Chaplain of the organization and pastor of Congress Street Methodist Church, he spoke in Memorial Continental Hall following a procession of police and firemen from the Ellipse.

More than 800 persons, half of them association members, attended. The speaker told them that, if young people come from a religious home, "they can carry the burden of tomorrow with a smile." He criticized parents who "care more for radios and cars than their children."

Urging parents to get pleasure from "launching youngsters out in the world," the Rev. Mr. Kester said "a man can do a good job, whether he is President of the United States or ditch-digger, policeman or fireman, if he gets some fun out of his job."

Others who spoke were Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police and president of the Harrison Men's Bible Class of Congress Street Church, composed of more than 100 police and firemen; Fire Chief Stephen Porter, class first vice president, and the Rev. Thomas Dade, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, and chaplain of the Catholic Police and Firemen's Society.

Sacred Heart Academy Girls Hold Class Day

Garbed in white, and carrying bouquets of roses, the members of the Class of 1940 filed into the auditorium. Elizabeth Litshgi, author of the class poem, read her work before assembled classmates and more than 200 guests.

Graduation exercises will be held at the school Friday at 7 p. m.

Keep Up Job In Palestine, Rabbi Urges

Mizrachi Chapter Fetes Donors, Hears Churchman Plead For Holy Land Work

The international situation must not be allowed to slacken the work of building up Palestine, speakers said at the fifteenth anniversary donors' banquet of the Washington Chapter, Mizrachi Women's Organization of America last night, which brought in approximately $1,000 for the cause.

"At this moment in Palestine we are breaking ground for a new school for girls, and are starting a new farm for natives and refugees," said Mrs. Louis Wald, of New York, the organization's national vice president.

Approximately 200 persons attended the dinner at Beth Sholom Temple.

Rabbi Metz Speaks

Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, of Adas Israel Congregation pointed out that the building of a homeland for the Jewish people not only is giving shelter and anchorage to refugees but is releasing religious forces in the lives of individuals and of nations.

"The world situation demonstrates the utter bankruptcy of materialism," Rabbi Metz said.

"Prosperity without righteousness is merely a mirage—and that goes for the United States, too.

"In order to approach realistically the problem before us, we must recapture the sweep and the vision of the ancient prophets," Rabbi Metz said.

"Chastening War"

He predicted that the present conflict will be a "chastening war." It will be followed by an era like the "gay twenties," he said, but there will be a trend toward reestablishing the supremacy of the Spirit.

"We know that truth always wins the last battle," Rabbi Metz added.

The Washington chapter of the organization, which is a religious women's Zionist movement, celebrated the anniversary in unison with other chapters in the United States. Mrs. I. Cymes is president of the local chapter, and Mrs. D. S. Margolis served as chairman of the banquet.

Methodists Fete Retiring Bishop At Hotel Affair

Methodists of the Nation's Capital will pay tribute to Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, retiring prelate of this area, at a reception tomorrow at 7 p. m. at the Willard Hotel.

Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of New York, and former Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper will be guest speakers. The Mount Vernon Place Methodist Choir will sing under Deane Shure's direction.

Bishop Hughes will perform his last executive duty this week when the Baltimore Annual Conference meets at Westminster, Md., Wednesday. He will be given a retired relationship with the Methodist Church at a meeting of the Jurisdictional Conference in Atlantic City late this month.

Theater Guild Winds Up Banner Birthday Year

Miss Helburn and Mr. Langner Hit Bullseye; Ground Breaks This Morning for New Theater; This, That and the Other About Amusements

LAST SATURDAY, June 1, the official closing date of the New York theatrical year, marked the end of the twenty-second season of the Theater Guild, one of America's oldest and most active organizations devoted exclusively to the production of stage plays. The season was one of the most successful in Guild history.

BELL

It was a little over a year ago that the Guild directorate decided that a governing board of seven was too unwieldy to meet the speedy demands of modern theater production. The paucity of Grade-A dramatists in the contemporary theater has made it necessary to reach quick decisions and give prompt attention to such good plays as present themselves. To meet this requirement, the long deliberations of the seven-person governing board were abandoned and Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner were made the Guild's administrators. They compiled an enviable record in their first year of concentrated effort.

The first of last season's Guild plays produced under the direct supervision of Miss Helburn and Mr. Langner was Philip Barry's "The Philadelphia Story," starring Katharine Hepburn, which Washington was privileged to view before it went on to a year's run on Broadway and a brief road tour which is to be continued next season. William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life" was their next, produced in association with Eddie Dowling. It captured both the Drama Critics Circle and Pulitzer prizes as the best play of the season. Then there were Ernest Hemingway's "The Fifth Column," more timely now than ever; Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in "The Taming of the Shrew" and later in Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night," produced in cooperation with the Playwrights' Company, and "Love's Old Sweet Song," another of Saroyan's provocative works.

That many hits in one season should be enough to satisfy anyone.

But Miss Helburn and Mr. Langner, it seems, are not content to rest upon their laurels. They already are hard at work planning next year's Guild offerings, in the hope that they can surpass last season's record—which will be a good trick, if they can do it. As previously announced here, their first production—in association with Gilbert Miller—will star Helen Hayes as Viola in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night." I am aware, of cousse, that the Guild never "stars" anybody, but what is the use of kidding ourselves?

This morning at 9:30—which is practically the middle of the night—Charles H. Olive and his associates, who have made such a success of the Atlas Theater, at 1331 H street northeast, will preside at ground-breaking ceremonies for the construction of their new Avon Theater, at Forty-eighth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest. This marks the expansion of the company's enterprises in a new direction. The ceremonies will be followed by adjournment to the Variety Club, in the Willard Hotel, and a midforenoon celebration which, quite obviously, will take the form of an "eye-opener."

That assiduous and astute package of dynamic energy known by the name of Harry Anger no longer is production manager of the Earle Theater. Mr. Anger, whose name completely belies his nature, has been moved up, instead of down. Hereafter he will be Managing Director Anger of the Earle, with Fred Thomas continuing as house manager. This promotion was made by Zone Manager John J. Payette to lighten the load carried by Washington District Manager Harry E. Lohmeyer with rapid extension of the Warner circuit in the Capital. Mr. Lohmeyer continues as supervisor of the other 20 Warner houses in the Capital, which is responsibility enough for any man. Incidentally, Harry Anger has earned his new job.

Speaking of the Earle, members of the Department of Speech and Drama of Catholic University—along with the local drama desks—will attend a preview screening of "Brother Orchid," starring Edward G. Robinson, today at 12:45 p. m. The first dramatization of Richard Connell's humorous story, as Washington well remembers, was done by Leo Brady, a C. U. junior, for the university drama group. Father Gilbert F. Hartke, head of the Department of Speech and Drama, who directed the play, and Anthony Messuri, graduating student, who played the title role in the school production, will be among those present. "Brother Orchid" opens on the Earle screen Friday.

"The Flag Speaks," concerning which we didn't know half enough when it was first recommended in this space, will be presented at Loew's Palace, come Friday, in conjunction with "Lillian Russell." Now that time and place have been determined, we repeat that when "The Flag Speaks," in Technicolor, it has something to say distinctly worth listening to.

Trans-Lux Bill Shows Horror Of 'Total War'

New Program Covers All Fronts, With Short Reels Added

All the horrors of this "total war" are told on the screen at the Trans-Lux Theater this week and you can be sure that no punches are pulled. These pictures tell their own story; they pound home the undeniable fact that the Nazis have bombed, and are bombing, civilians, men, women and children, as well as hospitals. Even maternity hospitals have not been spared. Old women and little children, scarcely visible for their bandages, are the leftovers after these bombers pass on.

In contrast there are extremely vivid pictures of Nazi prisoners being questioned by the French intelligence staff, also German prisoners of the parachute corps (boys of 18) captured in Holland as they arrive in England for rigid search and questioning. The latest, and probably the last pictures of King Leopold and the Belgian troops were taken just prior to the King's surrender.

Mediterranean Front Ready

On the Mediterranean "front" the strength and readiness of the Allied fleets are shown in the harbor of Alexandria, Egypt, while desert troops in Syria are ready on their camels for the worst that may come. In Canada, 1914-18 veterans form a "Sixth Front" to oust the fifth column activities, while in Italy Count Ciano addresses thousands in true Mussolini style on the anniversary of the Italo-German pact.

China's war continues, as shown by bombing pictures of Chunking; also there are the latest films from the besieged port of Narvik, and the liner President Roosevelt starting her journey to the States, with a passenger list of Americans. At home, President Roosevelt speaks to the Nation; Herbert Hoover addresses on home defense and Senator Pepper urges help for the Allies.

Sports are covered completely, and Lew Lehr introduces the Smoke Ring champion.

One of the finest screen recordings in a long time is to be seen in the March of Time, "The Philippines 1898-1946." "Information Please," again introduces Gene Tunney as the guest expert. "Tugboat Mickey" is the Donald Duck cartoon for the week.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 2.

SAM HARRIS, the producer, met Bill Hardy, the proprietor of the Gay '90's, yesterday at Toots Shor's. Hardy, whose cafe is a museum of old New York and who is a collector of all items pertaining to Manhattan's gas-lit era, told Harris of his newest acquistion—an unused ticket to the fight between Young Corbett and Terrible Terry McGovern . . . "Sam," said Hardy, "that ticket is 39 years old—and I'm going to present it to you" . . . Harris had been McGovern's manager. "That's very nice of you, Bill," he acknowledged. "But is that unused ticket a punched one?" . . . "No, that ticket was paid for," Hardy assured. "But what difference would that make?" . . . "I wouldn't take it if it was punched," Harris explained, "because I never accept complimentaries."

MAYOR LAGUARDIA soon will announce a new committee, composed of labor leaders and industrialists, to help stop the runaway shops . . . "Pittsburgh Phil," of Murder, Inc., is acting strangely, in the Raymond St. jail where he is now confined—with a possibility of interposing a defense of insanity . . . John Hanes, the former SEC Commissioner and Treasury official, soon will announce his association with the U. S. Lines and the Bankers Trust.

JOAN CRAWFORD, who was escorted by Franchot Tone to Fefe's Monte Carlo, wore heavy make-up, especially on her nose . . . Miss Crawford was not attempting to introduce a new style in make-up. She had to apply it heavily, in that one spot, because she has teeth-marks there. The baby she is adopting—Christina Crawford—bit Joan's nose.

DEFENSE COUNSEL now fear that the United States Attorney's office will hand down three indictments against the Hollywood visitors, because of the new turn taken in the evidence being presented before the grand jury . . . Lawrence Tibbett and Rose Bampton will sing at the Fair's Court of Peace, when the delegates to the ILGWU convention assembles there. The singers have waived their fees, in return for contributions to be made to their own union AGMA . . . District Attorney O'Dwyer, of Brooklyn, has ordered a special guard placed around Lepke, in Leavenworth, to see that no harm befalls him, pending the current murder investigations . . . The only hitch in Wanger's film production of Eugene O'Neill's "Long Voyage Home" is O'Neill's reluctance to have the scenario published.

THE NEW ISSUE of Town & Country features a mystery thriller called "For Want of a Body, the Case Was Lost." The author is Barbara Hudnut Boston. It concerns the case against Ivan Poderjay, who was suspected of murdering his wife, Agnes Tufverson, but who couldn't be prosecuted for that crime because her body never has been recovered . . . In that article the author refers to Poderjay's threats to kill the prosecutor assigned to his case—the prosecutor who spent three years translating 1,200 letters, in the hope of obtaining a clue. But throughout the article, the prosecutor isn't mentioned by name. He is former Assisant Attorney Lyon Boston. He's the author's husband.

BECAUSE SOME of its officers have made public addreses which antagonized Washington's officials, Paramount Films has ruled that its attorney must approve all speeches, before they are made public . . . Robert Scott, working at a cross-word puzzle in the Stork Club, was baffled by only one word—a seven-letter synonym for "precious stone." His mother is Mabel Boll, "The Diamond Queen" . . . The reporters covering Summer City Hall employ a special term for a LaGuardia tantrum—Butchkrieg . . . Sam Levene, in Sardi's last night, challenged his friends to duplicate the finger-manipulation stunts he did, while nickles were balanced on each finger. "The only thing that proves," Martha Hodge told Levene, "is that you must have spent a lot of time in front of a phone booth."

LARRY ADLER, the harmonica player, attended a party in honor of Noel Coward. There he met Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh, who reminded Larry that they last had met in the south of France more than a year ago . . . "I remember that you both were about to change your plans about going to America," Adler said, "but you never told me why." . . . "Well, now I can tell you," Olivier replied. "We both were afraid of coming to this country. I wasn't sure of having a play, and Vivien was afraid because nobody in America knew her."

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Washington Post inadvertently went Leonard Lyons one better in his column of June 1 by omitting a line of type in his paragraph about Leon Henderson. The way Lyons wrote it was: "Leon Henderson, who was designated by the President to be one of seven defense coordinators, in charge of price stabilization, was asked to relate what his contribution will be . . . 'All I can say right now,' said Henderson, 'is that this is a boon to the country—because it means that I cannot make any speeches.' We omitted the "—because it means that I cannot make any speeches." Sorry. Honest.

Atlas

Pat Rooney, jr., and Herman Timberg, jr., sons of famed vaudevillians, headed the show on the Atlas stage yesterday afternoon. The boys' flair for comedy convulsed the packed house, and their solid dancing stopped the show cold. They could leave the stage only after several encores and a curtain speech.

The next act introduced a unique entertainer, Jimmy Edmondson, who writes on a blackboard upside down and does quite a few other things in the "Corrigan" manner, and seemed to register with the audience. As usual, Leon Brusiloff's "Music Masters," led by Sparty Donato, were on hand on the stage with their own interpretations of current and yesteryear hits.

The double-feature screen attraction was Hugh Herbert in "La Conga Nights" and the first local showing of James Dunn in "Sons of the Navy."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 2 (INS).—That swell actress, Margaret Sullavan, has just been signed to co-star with Freddie March in "Flotsam," David Loew and Albert Lewin's first joint production. John Cromwell will direct as soon as he finishes Conrad's "Victory," at Paramount.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Authored by Marlene Dietrich's good friend and constant escort, Erich Maria Remarque, "Flotsam" appeared first as a magazine serial and was later published as a novel. It's a moving tale of the plight of Europe's countless refugees.

Messrs. Loew and Lewin would like to find a new title for the film version, so if you have any bright ideas speak up.

No news from war-torn Europe seemed as plaintive as the little bulletin from the Schweizer film Zeitung to the Hays offices giving Switzerland's poll of the 10 most popular stars of the movies. In the midst of the terrifying war communiques there was a wistful note in the explanation: "This poll was taken several weeks ago but because of cables crowded with far more important news we could not get it through." But I wonder if it isn't very important news to Hollywood producers to know that one the few remaining countries unravaged by war is still so interested in American movies that seven United States stars earned places on the list of popular ten. In the order of their slection they are: Tyrone Power, Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney (who was tops here), Nelson Eddy, Jean Gabin, Zarah Leander, Jeanette MacDonald, Greta Garbo, Ginger Rogers and Danielle Darrieux.

Virginia Gilmore of the much publicized shape is proving that she has something besides a pair of photogenic legs. Sam Goldwyn, who has her under contract, loaned her to Twentieth Century-Fox for "Manhattan Heartbreak" (new version of "Bad Girl") and when the picture was previewed t'other eve Virginia got raves. Now RKO's Cliff Reid wants her for "Laddie" and Sam has agreed. So she'll go on loan-out again. Tim Holt is already set for the title role in the old Gene Stratton Porter favorite.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville turned up hand in hand at the Cocoanut Grove to see the ice show and begged to be allowed to try out the ice. When the Ambassador management said no dice, Jackie consoled himself by playing the drums with Joe Reichman's band; Bill Powell's stand-in and great pal, Doc Dearborn, was killed in an auto accident Thursday night. Sad news for Bill and a tragic blow to Dearborn's wife, who recently had a baby.

Tay Garnett has put up a $500 prize to raise money for the Red Cross and the town's glamour gals, including Irene Dunne, Joan Bennett, Bette Davis, Roz Russel, Ann Sothern and Sally Blane, are selling chances at five bucks apiece. Drawing will be held at Ciro's June 23; Hilda, Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, sr.'s maid, received a cable from Evelyn Laye stating that everything is all right with her—which must mean those persistent reports of her husband, Frank Lawton's death are only rumors; Phil Holmes is back home after eight months in Paris.

"The Baker's Wife" at the Esquire continues to be a magnet for the town's celebs with Henry Fonda, Tyrone Power and Nigel Bruce the latest to view the French masterpiece; Orson Welles took Dolores Del Rio to the Beverly Tropics for dinner, but when it came time to pay the check he discovered he didn't have a cent with him and Dolores had to come to his rescue; Lana Turner and Artie Shaw, rumored to be regretting their impulsive elopement, were at the Casa Manana dancing every dance and looking at each other anything but coolly.

That's all today. I said that's all.

Young Star

Contrary to the general belief that only women of much experience can portray dramatic roles successfully, Betty Field, who has just turned 20, has grabbed off two of the year's biggest acting plums. Following her appearance in "Of Mice and Men," she was cast opposite Fredric March in Paramount's filmization of the Joseph Conrad novel, "Victory."

In Hollywood

Hollywood, June 2.

The Quintuplets' birthday brought to mind their first screen father, John Qualen, who was so funny as their startled, surprised parent that for a year after that picture, whenever he showed his face on the screen, audiences howled and thought of him only as the father of the Quints. He became so embarrased that he gave up his contract. Not until he played in "Grapes of Wrath" did he feel audiences had forgotten his funny father role. Now, in "The Long Voyage Home," he has the same chance at stardom as Walter Brennan had in "These Three." And he's just had his portrait painted by George Biddle, of that social Philadelphia family, and when finished, Qualen and Biddle did a flute duet for Walter Wanger.

HOPPER

It looks as though Howard Hughes has found his leading lady. Anyway he's signed up Margaret Young, whom he's been coaching for the last two months.

When Barbara Hutton went to the preview with Richardo Cortez and Richard Gully and saw the mob and camera boys, she was so frightened she wouldn't get out of the car, so went for a drive while they saw the picture.

'Tis said Pat Weaver, who used to beau Roz Russel around, will marry Helen Mack . . . On Ben Alexander's twenty-ninth birthday, his mother gave him a book called "Milestones," which is a pictorial record of Ben's career from babyhood to date.

Walter Tetley, who's 18 but looks 12, was on Fred Allen's show for five years, and will be with him when he comes to the coast and also in the picture "Love Thy Neighbor." Walter tells me he worked with three of the Dead End Kids before they ever became the Dead Ends. They were Billy Halop, who's acquired a British accent for "Tom Brown's School Days" and sounds like Ronnie Colman, Bobby Jordan, and Huntz Hall. He said they were just nice kids—not a bit tough.

Playing in "Dead End" developed their characters and gave them that reputation—and they felt they had to live up to it.

Eddie Bracken, from the the Broadway play "Too Many Girls," has only made one picture—"The Life of Henry Aldrich," which hasn't yet been seen. But he's coming out again to do the part he originated in "Too Many Girls" at RKO, then does two more at Paramount which cancels the new play he was to do with Dwight Wyman in New York next fall. Harold Lloyd is also hot and heavy to get him for his first comedy.

And speaking of Lloyd, his daughter Gloria is one of the most beautiful girls I've ever seen. I don't suppose he'd dream of letting her go on the screen.

The neighbors of Greta Garbo are complaining bitterly. She's taking singing lessons, and while trying to become the Swedish nightingale, her neighbors declare she sounds more like a basso profundo. And now they want to be alone.

Yanks Stampede Browns, 13-4 and 11-1

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

One afternoon in Cleveland a couple of weeks ago, Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees became suddenly irked. His Yanks were nine games out on the lead, his revamped line-up was achieving very little and his champions were sinking deeper into last place. Then he made a bold stroke.

POVICH

He sent Frankie Crosetti, his .161-hitting shortstop back into the line-up and benched Bill Knickerbocker. He orderd Outfielder Buster Mills to the bench and replaced him with George Selkirk, who had been in a hitting slump. If the Yankees were going to get licked in the pennant race, they were going down swinging with the same team that had been good enough to win four pennants in a row, McCarthy declared.

From that date the Yankees started to climb. From the outset of the season, they had been steadily falling behind the Red Sox at the rate of two games per week. In the past 12 days they have not only checked their descent but have hacked 3½ games from the Red Sox's lead. Fourteen victories in their last 18 games moved McCarthy's club from eighth to fourth, and now they are charging on the leaders.

The third-place Tigers will be the first club the Yankees will catch. The Tigers are only 2½ games removed, and they have neither the pitching nor the infielding to resist the Yankee charge. After the Tigers, the Yanks will overhaul the second-place Indians. Then will follow the battle to the wire with the Red Sox and it may be none too strenuous for the Yanks.

Cleveland is a diminishing threat to win the pennant. The glaring outfield weakness of the Indians is being revealed daily. The Indians don't own a regular outfielder who is hitting as much as .300, and Bob Feller is now playing something of a lone hand on what was once a potent Cleveland pitching staff. Johnny Allen has won only two games thus far against three defeats. Al Smith, the former Giant southpaw, shows four victories against no defeats, but he is not the solid sort. Al Milnar, for all of his six victories, strikes no terror into the opposition.

The Indians are a sure-fire first division club if only because they have Bob Feller, a pair of extra-base sluggers in Hal Trosky and Ken Keltner, and the finest second-base-shortstop combination in the league in the rookies Ray Mack and Lou Boudreau. But in any comparison with the Red Sox and the Yanks they must suffer.

A pennant triumph by the Red Sox would be the most amazing feat in modern baseball history. Pitching is popularly supposed to be 70 per cent of a team's strength and the Red Sox entered the 1940 race with a pitching staff comprised of Lefty Grove and a host of nonentities. But despite Grove's flop—he has won only one game since the first day of the season—the Red Sox have never been worse than second.

Boston's lofty position is traceable, of course, to the team's tremendous power. It is no accident that Joe Cronin's club is leading the league in club batting. In contrast to Cleveland's outfielders, Red Sox outfielders can show a batting average of .376, and certainly no drawback to the club is Jimmy Foxx, who is leading the league in home runs and runs batted in.

Jim Tabor, of whom there were early season doubts, has settled down and is blossoming as another dangerous Boston slugger. He is curbing his wild throwing, and makes the Boston infield a formidable one. Joe Cronin and Bobby Doerr have not yet begun to show the power of which they are capable. If that pair were in a slugging mood, the Red Sox of 1940 would rank with the heaviest-socking clubs of all time.

It has been the Boston power which has carried Cronin's team along at its terrific pace, but power sans pitching doesn't win pennants. The Detroit Tigers for years were the power club in the league, but couldn't win. Unless Cronin turns up some pitchers—unless three of his rookie hurlers make good in the same season—how are the Red Sox going to withstand the Yankee challenge?

The Yankees have it. They've just begun to roll. Only last week, Charley Keller and George Selkirk climbed into the .300 class of hitters. Bill Dickey made his first and second homers of the season on consecutive days. The Yanks have been winning even during the illness of Red Rolfe. Frankie Crosetti and Babe Dahlgren are push-overs at bat, but that doesn't seem to matter.

The Yankees are the best defensive club in the league. They have the best catcher. Defensively, their outfield is superior even to the Red Sox's. But the item that will win the pennant for the Yankees is their pitching. When the Indians begin to bog down under the weight of double-headers, and Joe Cronin will be wondering where his next winning pitcher is coming from, Joe McCarthy's club will be galloping blithely along. Because over the 154-game route the club with the pitching is the solid team in the race.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 2.—TAGGING ALL BASES.

BASEBALL—The beaning of Peewee Reese brings to mind a dozen distressing memories of players crumbling into the dirt with broken heads. Baseball is pretty backward about doing something to prevent such tragedies. Only in comparatively recent times has it become obligatory for both leagues to have a stretcher handy, with which to carry off the stricken player. Doctors agreed that Ray Chapman would have lived, after Carl Mays beaned him a generation ago, if he had been carried off the field. As for helmets, which seem to be a sensible solution, few players will consent to wear them. The average player regards them as unmanly and fears the ridicule a couple of apes might fasten on him. Years ago ball players had the same prejudices against using gloves, and when Rogers Bressnahan introduced shin-guards behind the plate, many old players (and old fans, for that matter) thought it represented a death-knell for American virility. Baseball in general is pulling for Reese. He has his career ahead of him, and it promises to be a great career. It would be inexpressably tragic if a stray pitch, in a stray game, should halt or color that career, for want of a simple protective device.

CONSIDINE

RACING—Hooray for Belmont. Al Vanderbilt and his associates will turn over the gross receipts Wednesday to the American Red Cross. Not only that, but he has lined up a fine card.

This is one of the few instances in sports history where a charity gets the gross receipts. It's usually 10 per cent of the net, or 10 per cent of the profits, which are hacked into transparency with what Damon Runyon calls "etceteras."

The seventy-second running of the Belmont Stakes, next Saturday, will pit Bimelech against Gallahadion again—with both of them probably being run into the ground by something with a name like Old Sweatshirt ($84.20.)

GOLF—Better watch Sam Snead in the open this week. When he came up three years ago, the Open (and everything else) seemed to be his oyster. But he developed a habit of just missing. He has never won a major title, though he tossed away the 1939 Open when it reached out to shake hands with him. He came up to the seventeenth hole of his final round far enough in front so that he could have won the jackpot by taking five on the par four seventeenth and five on the easy par five eighteenth. He took a five on that seventeenth an an unbelievable, snake-killing eight on that eighteenth. Nobody ever expected him to do much for the rest of his life. But I wonder if those obits weren't premature.

Last week he made a blistering finish to come in second in the Goodall Round Robin, after being out of the running. After that he went to his club, Shawnee-on-Delaware, which nestles in the hills that roll into the Delaware water gap, and put himself in the hands of a trainer. The trainer has had him walking up and down those hills, training something like a prizefighter trains. Snead will be the best-conditioned player in that field. At 8-to-1 (Jack Doyle's price) he looks like money in the bank.

BOXING—Arturo Godoy is going to try something June 20 which four other fighters have failed to do—go the route with Joe Louis a second time. Natie Brown, Lee Ramage, Bob Pastor and Max Schmeling warded off the Bomber for the full distances of their first fight, Schmeling, of course, belting him out in the twelfth. All got knocked out in return fights, with Pastor lasting until the eleventh. Tommy Farr went 15 heats with Joe, but flopped so badly after that he never could get a return shot.

Wouldn't you think that track and field, with all those gigantic fellows like Al Blozis of Georgetown, would occasionally produce a challenger for the heavyweight title. Yet, perennially, boxing champions come up out of terrible poverty and thrive on food which would revolt a Bowery bum. While the clean-limbed college boys with a good start in life and an early knowledge and appreciation of diet and training science, either won't fight, or when they try to, are terrible bums.

4 Homers, 4 Triples, And 6 Doubles Mark Slugging of Champs In Twin Victories

By the Associated Press

New York, June 2.—A 26-hit batting spree by the World Champion Yankees in two games today swamped the St. Louis Browns 13 to 4 and 11 to 1 and gave New York a record of nine victories in the last 10 contests.

Every one of the Yankees joined in the hitting in the opener and all but the pitcher hit safely in the nightcap. George Selkirk hit home runs in each game, his first coming with two on during a five-run fifth inning that finished Bob Harris.

Joe DiMaggio also homered with one on and Bill Knickerbocker hit two doubles and a triple in the first game.

The Bombers blasted out 10 runs in the first two innings of the second session, getting six off Vernon Kennedy in one frame on three triples, a single, a double and a walk. The other four were off Roxie Lawson and three of them counted on a homer by Bill Dickey.

All this made the pitching chores of Marius Russo and Marvin Breuer easy. Russo allowed seven hits, including a homer by Chet Laabs, in the first game and Breuer cut this ration to five in the second game.

Lyons Wins 225th Big League Victory; Foxx's Homer Decides

By International News Service

Boston, June 2.—A ninth-inning home run by Capt. Jimmy Foxx today gave the Boston Red Sox a 10-to-8 decision over the Chicago White Sox after the Cronimen dropped the twin bill opener, 6 to 0.

The 425-foot homer, which enabled the Red Sox to maintain their American League leadership, came with none out and Ted Williams on base.

The 29-hit slugfest, which included four home runs, saw eight pitchers march to the hill. Jim Hagby was credited with his third win and Ed Smith was charged with the loss.

In the first game, Teddy Lyons, 39-year-old White Sox ace, handed the Boston boys a six-hit shutout. Bill Butland and Joe Heving shared the hurling assignment for the Red

Reese Reported Resting Easily, But Still Dizzy

Chicago, June 2 (AP).—Harold (Peewee) Reese, Brooklyn's 20-year-old shortstop, was resting comfortably today, but still dizzy from the blow on the head he received in yesterday's game with the Cubs.

Dr. John F. Davis, Cubs' physician who is treating Reese, said additional X-ray examinations of the spot where the rookie was struck by a pitched ball, revealed no skull fracture.

"However, I plan to make further examinations tomorrow," Dr. Davis said. "When Reese moves around he becomes dizzy and nauseated, so we couldn't take all the X-rays we wanted to today. I am almost certain now there is no fracture, but I'm not excluding that possibility until I take further pictures."

He added that if Reese improves at a normal pace he should be able to play again in a few weeks. The little infielder listened to his team's double victory over the Cubs today over his bedside radio.

Dodgers Win Twice As Reds Split Even

Walters Captures Ninth Straight, 11-1; Bees Take 2d, 2-0

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 2.—With unbeaten Bucky Walters easing along to his ninth victory, the Cincinnati Reds blasted the first game of today's boubleheader from the Boston Bees, 11 to 1, but wasted almost an opportunity an inning to suffer a 2-to-0 whitewash in the nightcap at the hands of Dick Errickson.

Three-quarters of Cincinnati's pitching was a manager's delight, with Bucky allowing only five hits and Jim Turner and Joe Beggs giving the Bees but four, none until Sebastian Sisti's single in the seventh. A bobbled double play ball opened the gates for the Boston runs in the eighth inning of the sunset game. Bucky was a trifle wild, but the only run scored off him resulted from a fumble by Johnny Rizzo. Johnny compensated by hitting two homers.

Chester Ross opened the Bees' seventh with a single, went to second on an infield play, and scored when Rizzo bobbled Andrews' single. Outside of that the only men to get on base up to the sixth were three walkers and a hit batsman.

All this time the Reds were busy. Three singles peppered out in the first inning, Ernie Lombardi doubled, and Rizzo sent the ball over the left field fence for a total of five runs.

With two out in the third, Bill Werber singled and Rizzo dropped the ball behind the centerfield wall for two more runs. In the fifth two singles, Eddie Miller's error, and a fly produced another brace. Lonnie Frey's single, Frank McCormick's double and another single by Werber made the final pair in the sixth.

Turner Breeses Along

Only 18 men faced Jim Turner in the first six innings of the second game. The former Bee walked Max West in the fifth, but Max died immediately in a double play.

Rain began falling in the seventh, and after considerable towel waving by Manager Casey Stengel of the Bees, time was called with one out in the eighth.

A 36-minute rest did Turner no good. Al Lopez singled, Miller beat out a roller to third, and then Billy Myers fumbled Errickson's double-play Hopper to fill thet bases.

Sisti then flied, scoring Lopez,

Brooklyn Whips Cubs, 3-2, 2-1; Wasdell Big Star

By International News Service

Chicago, June 2.—The rampaging Brooklyn Dodgers today took both ends of a twin bill from the Chicago Cubs before a crowd of 32,500. The Brooklynites came from behind in the ninth inning to win the first fracas, 3 to 2, and tucked away the nightcap, 2 to 1, in the second stanza.

With the Cubs leading the opener, 2 to 1, the Dodgers opened the ninth with singles by Vosmik and Harry Lavagetto. Wasdell then dropped a double in deep right field, scoring Charley Gilbert, who was running for Vosmik, and Lavagetto. Van Lingle Mungo, who entered the game in the eighth, was credited with the victory, while Bill Lee was charged with the loss. The two teams divided a total of 14 hits evenly between them.

Lavagetto opened the scoring in the second frame of the nightcap. After beating out a hit through short, he and Dolph Camilli, who also singled, scored on Leo Du-

Godoy Imitator Baffles Louis in Title Fight Drill

Greenwood Lake, N. Y., June 2 (AP).—Joe Louis, training for his return bout with Arturo Goday on June 20, had no trouble with three of his sparmates today, but the fourth—the one who fights most like Godoy—still had him baffled.

This one is Joe O'Gatty, of Toms River, N. J., a crowding, pushing, crouching type, much like the Chilean. He mauled the heavyweight champion around the ring, pushed him against the ropes and into corners, and altogether had a lot of fun for himself for two rounds.

Joe made up for this embarrassment by flattening Emil Scholz, a weaving, bobbing Bostonian, in one round with a left hook; giving Emanuel Murray, of New York, a lot of body punishment for a round, and tagging George Nicholson frequently for two more.

Cleveland Snatches Opener, 7-2, but Drops Second, 12-6

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 2.—Cleveland and Philadelphia divided a double-header at Shibe Park today, with the visitors winning the opener, 7 to 2, and the Athletics coming back in the second for a 12-to-6 triumph.

The park was jammed to capacity with 33,023 customers and 2,000 more who didn't pay.

Bob Feller held Philadelphia to eight hits in winning his eighth game in the opener. He was aided by Hal Trosky's thirteenth home run and another by Lou Boudreau—his third this season.

In the second game, called at the end of the eighth inning because of Philadelphia's Sunday laws, the A's pounded four Cleveland pitchers for 13 hits—scoring seven runs in the seventh. Ed Heusser, on the mound for the Mackmen, hung up his second victory this year.

Early Attack Nets Detroit All Its Runs

Monteagudo Victim Of Quick Outburst; Hudson Brilliant In Relief Stint

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Sixth place was evacuated by the Nats yesterday. Unable to withstand an early onslaught by the Tigers and harassed by error-column activities in the Washington defense, the Nats surrendered an 8-6 game. They retreated to seventh place.

All eight Detroit runs poured across the plate in the first four innings. Twelve thousand Griffin Stadium fans saw the Nats counter-attack late in the afternoon with only moderate success. They out-hit the Tigers, 12 to 9, if that is any consolation.

Rene Monteagudo, little Cuban southpaw, felt the full force of the Tigers' early-inning assault. He was the victim of Hank Greenberg's eighth homer of the season in the first inning, which fetched the Tigers two runs. He yielded two more runs to Detroit in the second inning, and was knocked loose from three runs in the third, by which time the Tigers had a 7-to-0 lead.

Hudson Brilliant

Sidney Hudson made a valiant attempt to keep the Nats in the ball game. Relieving Monteagudo at the start of the fourth inning, he did not yield a hit or a run until he was removed in the ninth. The only Detroit hit from the third to the finish was a useless single off Joe Haynes in the ninth.

Paul Trout was removed from the box in the fourth inning after he made motions toward wasting his 7-to-1 lead. He gave up three runs to the Tigers in the third inning and surrendered another run in the fourth, when Manager Del Baker turned the pitching job over to Al Benton.

In the eighth and ninth Benton weathered the feeble counter assaults of the Nats, permitting only one run in each session. The Nats' parting shot was Zeke Bonura's home run into the left field bleachers with two out and the bases empty in the ninth, which they entered trailing by three runs.

The Tigers dallied with Monteagudo. Dick Bartell greeted him with a floating double against the right field wall and McCosky drew a walk, but when Bartell attempted to steal third on the fourth ball to McCosky, Jake Early cut him down with a throw to Lewis. Thus only one Tiger was on base when Hank Greenberg sent Griffith Stadium's longest home run of the year soaring high into the left center bleachers.

Tigers Score Two More

In the second inning, the Tigers came back for more—and scored two more. Again they delayed their attack until two was out. Three successive hits—a single by Trout, Bartell's double that took a freak hop over Walker's head, and McCosky's single to right produced the runs.

Monteagudo was still out there when the Tigers came up with three runs in the third to move into a 7-0 lead. Greenberg doubled off the left field wall and York drew a walk. Pofahl made a spectacular pick-up of Higgins' infield single but when he tried to cut down Greenberg at third he threw wide of the bag and Greenberg scored. A walk to Tebbetts fulled the bases with one out, and Trout singled home two runs with a blow to left. Tebbetts was trapped off third by Walker's throw to the plate.

Back in the first inning, the Nats failed ingloriously to score some runs. They filled the bases with none out on Case's double and walks to Lewis and Welaj. But in this crisis both Walker and Bonura obliged Trout by striking out, and Early lifted a harmless fly to McCosky.

All of a sudden in the third the Nats unloosed a four-hit attack against Trout. Case singled, and with two out, Walker and Bonura doubled and Early singled. The uprising produced three runs, but fizzled when Early was cut down

Pardoe Is Beaten 7 and 5 in Finals

Mr. and Mrs. Davy Win at Congressional; Gibson and Fleming Lead Manor Qualifying; Utz Trophy to Enright; Harvey Is Medalist

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A new champion was crowned at Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday when Dr. Edwin Rice put on a subpar spurt in the afternoon to defeat C. H. Pardoe, 7 and 5, in the 36-hole finals.

Pardoe reached the title round with three consecutive upset triumphs, but he was no match for Dr. Rice in the title round. The new champion, who succeeds Ralph S. Fowler, led 4-up at the halfway mark and held a dormie eight-hole lead on the eleventh tee in the afternoon. He took 6 on the par 3 eleventh, however, and lost the twelfth to a par before he cut Pardoe's rally short by winning the thirteenth hole and the match.

Despite going three over par on the eleventh hole in the second round, Dr. Rice was only one over par with a 71 when he played the round out.

O. M. Reed won the second flight, defeating Lafayette Franklin, jr., 6 and 5, while the third-flight final was also one-sided, with Dr. F. R. Shea defeating M. R. Palmer, 6 and 5. George H. Bailey, jr., won the fourth flight with a one-hole victory over Paul Campbell.

CONGRESSIONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Myron Davy won low gross honors in the mixed Scotch foursome at Congressional, scoring an 85 for the round while low net went to Mrs. Arnold McNitt and Marvin Johnston, with 88-18, 70. Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Berquist turned in the second low net total of 90-19, 71.

George K. Brobeck's 95-26, 69, was good for medalist's honors in the President's Cup qualifying rounds, while three tied for second, J. P. Strong, 82-11, 71; F. E. Berquist, 81-10, 71; and J. E. Freeman, 82-11, 71.

Freeman was in the prize list twice in the big day's competition, scoring 82-11, 71, to tie for low net with A. L. Strong in the club breakfast foursomes. Strong was 86-15, 71. The winning foursome was O. T. Smith, D. W. Smith, G. A. Ford and J. E. Freeman.

MANOR

Earle Skinker Wins School Golf Title, 2-1

Wilson Senior Beats George Vass After Ousting Clark, 6-4

Earle Skinker proved his class among the District's schoolboy golfers by winning the seventh annual scholastic title and The Washington Post trophies yesterday at Congressional Country Club. The Wilson High senior defeated an old rival from Western, George Vass, 2 and 1, in the final round.

After winning the medal with a 72 Friday at Kenwood and scoring two one-sided victories Saturday at Manor, Skinker routed Frank Clark, of Montgomery Blair, 6 and 4, in the morning semi-finals before he defeated Vass in his final fling at scholastic competition.

The boys were a little over-golfed from the three-day tournament and thus the scoring in the finals was well over par. When the match ended on the seventeenth hole, the new champion had par on the eighteenth for a 78, while Vass needed a par four for an 81. Skinker, who succeeds a schoolmate, Ralph Bogart, was medalist and runner-up last year.

Frank Emmet, who personally supervises the tournament each year, presented a permanent trophy, given by The Washington Post, to Skinker, while the original Post trophy will remain in Wilson High School. Skinker received a cup from the scholastic association for medalist, while Vass received one for runner-up.

Vass was 1 down in his morning match to 15-year-old Arthur Myers, of Roosevelt, as late as the fourteenth hole, but he finished with a string of pars to win, 2 and 1. Skinker led Clark 2 up at the turn and was only two over par when at second trying to take an extra base.

Hudson was the victim of an unearned Tiger run in the fourth. He hit McCosky and walked Gehringer, but he forced Greenberg to pop up. On York's double-play ball, Bloodworth threw wild into the Washington dugout, and McCosky scored.

The Nats got that run back in the fourth when Bloodworth walked and scored on Pofahl's long double to left. That blow knocked Trout from the box and Benton put a stop to the rally.

While Hudson was keeping them in the ball game with his no-hit pitching for a five-inning stretch, the Nats succeeded in scoring only a single run off Benton. That one evolved from Early's double in the eighth and Case's single. In the ninth Bonura's homer served only to give the final score a more respectable aspect.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Sidney Hudson turned in the most noteworthy performance among the Nats yesterday and moves into the lead in the Man of the Month contest. Points were distributed as follows:

To Hudson, seven points, because he pitched no-hit ball in a five-inning relief shift and valiantly attempted to keep the Nats in the ball game.

To Zeke Bounra, six points, because he made a single, double and home run, driving in two runs and scoring two.

To Jimmy Pofahl, four points, because he made two hits and played a smashing game in the field despite the error he is charged with.

To George Case, four points, because he doubled and singled twice.

To Jake Early, three points, because he made a single and a double and threw out the only man who attempted to steal. The totals:

Sidney Hudson	7	Jimmy Pofahl	4

Indian Spring Team Two Under Par With Best Ball of 68; Rippy Cards a 71

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, June 2.—The outstanding amateur team from Indian Spring, Roger S. Peacock, the Middle Atlantic champion, and Claude Rippy, a man of many titles, added the Maryland State Golf Association four-ball championship to their list today with a 3 and 2 victory over defending champions Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes, Rolling Road, over the Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club.

Rippy came through with his best round of the five-week tournament, a 1 over par 71 over the championship Five Farms layout, while Peacock contributed a 72, both unofficial scores, and between them the Indian Spring shotmakers carved a best ball 69.

Take Early Lead

The Baltimoreans won the first hole when Barnes was the only player in the foursome to get down in par figures. He halved the next with a four when Rippy and Peacock both matched par and then Peacock layed an approach shot within inches of the pin on the third hole to halve the match.

The next six holes were halved, all in par figures and the match was even at the turn. The Barnes-Overton team had trouble on the tenth when they both found the water in front of the green and Rippy easily won the hole with a birdie.

Halve in Birdies

The new champions went two up on the eleventh, winning the hole with a par, and the large gallery was treated to a thrill on the thirteenth when Overton and Rippy halved the hole in birdie twos, Overton dropping a 12-footer. The Indian Spring duo took a three-hole lead when Overton and Barnes again missed par on the fifteenth and the next hole was halved and the match was over.

The victory was the second for Indian Spring in the 3-year tournament history, as Elliot Spicer and Leroy Sassacer won in 1938, followed by Overton and Barnes in 1939.

Lee's Birthday Romps Off With Hunter Title at Richmond

Big Half-Bred Wins 5 Blues, Calvert Up

Silver King Takes Open Jumping Title As 1,500 See Deep Run Show End

By Anne Hagner

Richmond, June 2.—Practically unbeatable in every class he entered, Lee's Birthday, owned by George G. Lee, galloped off with the hunter championship of the Deep Run Horse Show here today.

With Alex Calvert up, the big halfbred won five blue ribbons out of seven classes to take the tri-color over Mrs. George Watts Hill's Balkonian, Reserve winner.

The victory of Lee's Birthday came as no surprise to the 1,500 spectators at Deep Run's Hunt Club this afternoon, for he had already won the Hampton (Va.) championship and the Reserve award at Virginia Beach earlier this seasor.

Mrs. Perry Rides

Lee's Birthday's blue ribbons came in the halfbred, the lightweight, the Corinthian and the touch-and-out yesterday, and the ladies' hunters, with Mrs. Haggin Perry aboard, today.

Balkonian, from Mrs. Hill's Quail Roost stables at Rougemont, N. C., won Reserve in the conformation division at the Washington show over Mrs. Perry's Demopolis, no longer a member of the Perry show string, since his recent sale to S. W. Kaufman, of Indianapolis, Ind.

The Open jumping title went to Mrs. K. M. Bruce's silver King, of Ellerson, Va., with 14 points. The consistent gray won over Peggy Sampson's Black Boy, ridden by Newton Mayo, runner-up with 12 points.

Fire Chief Wins

The handy hunters event, judge on conformation, performance, and promptness, went to Elizabeth Lloyd's Fire Chief, with Truman Dodson riding. To prove his versatility, Fire Chief came back in the ladies class to take third to Lee's Birthday, and Patsy Anne Benoit on Sport Marvel. Judy Molter rode the big chestnut in the later event.

Lee's Birthday combined with Balkonian and Mrs. Perry's Bo Bend to turn in a nearly perfect round in the Hunt teams, but the trio was disqualified because young Dickie Kelley rode in another team in the same class, in variance with the rules. Thus the blue went to Sport Marvel, Senator Robert Daniels' Village Miss, and Dr. E. T. Trice's Soothsayer.

In the hunter preliminary for the championship, judge under saddle, Balkonian out-hacked the other three qualified horses to pick up additional points toward the title, although they did not affect the final decision.

Dear Al:

Selections at Charles Town

Sammy Palumbo's victory with Blahblah last Saturday was his ninteenth winner of the meeting. Last year he averaged better than one winner a day and he may top that mark this time. If you have wondered about the absence of Jockey Johnny Shanks, Washington boy, he is working for Lou Schaeffer, trainer of Challendon, Pictor and the others. Incidentally, Challendon has a sprightly little sister up on Owner W. L. Brann's farm. Friend Alan Clarke wishes somebody would bring Sir Mowlee and English Harry, two horses he bred, back to Maryland this fall. The breeder gets a bonus when products of his stud wins open races in Maryland. Since leaving the Free State English Harry has won 14 races. They were married Saturday night—Jockey Willie Dufford took Maxine Machado, widow of Jockey Lou Machado, as his bride in a ceremony at Berryville, Va. Ralph Wilhelm and his wife were best man and bridesmaid. The suspension of Jockey Willie Nertney has been cut from ten to five days on recommendation of Patrol Judge W. J. Daly. The day on which Nertney cut over on a horse in going to the front, the track was deep and slippery and the boy deserved a break for that reason. The further entry of Mrs. John Hay Whitney's horse, Upper Berth, will be refused by the stewards. The veteran bolted into the fence and tossed his rider. Failing eyesight is believed to have caused the accident. Henry Tait Rodier and his Washington Golf and Country Club crew will have their annual outing Wednesday. The $1,000 handicap that day will be named for the club. Morning Flight and Timetta, which turned flipflops in the stall gate last week, have been added to Starter Joe Morrisey's schooling list and will have to brush up on their post manners before being allowed to start again. Edwin Churchill, popular apprentice, and Freddie Faust, veteran rider, are Washington boys. Apprentice Ellsworth Lindy is from Terra Haute, Ind., and is only 17 years old. Received a letter from a State hospital for the insane. In part it reads: "Bill: We are finding your selections useful here. We have a test in which the paper is placed on the table and the patient is asked to read something. If he turns to your selections we immediately place him in a straight-jacket." Thank you, pal.

BILL.

First race—Regal son could be the right one in this rather open affair. I have reason to believe this one can run and will string along. Shanteb, if taken off the reserve list, will be dangerous. Bread King has speed and should like this short sprint.

Second race—I guess I'm a glutton for punishment, but I have made up my mind to run this one down. Devil's Broth goes in this maiden field and could be the right one. Dabs has shown enough to warrant backing. Blenethel for the show award.

Third race—Olivile, on the reserve list, gets light weight and needs only to run back to a race early in the meeting. Beacon Queen and Depinard are good now and will be close. Lacey Miss is going to awaken soon, if not here.

Fourth race—Lena Girl turned in one race here that would make her the winner in this affair. I'm going to try to make it her day. Strumming has a bit of class and will be in the thick of contention. Nanci's Best has a chance at the weights.

Fifth race—Forced to go gack to the short-sprint champion in this. Miss Warning has done everything asked and should win another. Lulu Khayyam had poor racing luck last out and is dangerous. I believe Hiblaze can better recent efforts.

Sixth race—In the day's handicap I'm going to take Giggle Lee. She breaks from the number one post and will save the ground she lost last out. Dulie was raced into the ground in that recent test and is the to beat. Should the track become fast, I look for Brush Hook to improve.

Seventh race—Spotless could take a purse in a race of this kind and is fresh and ready. Erada will be dangerous, but may be going back too soon. Best Policy, on general good form, deserves consideration.

Eighth race—Hastings View is ready for the best as that recent effort indicates. Made his move too soon and I expect a waiting ride today. Aufoin is the class and will be right there or thereabouts. Bellthorn probably needed that last and is a threat. Ellbeesee and Unlawful are possibilities.

Substitute race—If No. 1 is used, I'll take The Swagman, Abbot's Lark and Hagerstown Boy. If No. 2 is used, I'll take Blue Prelude, Ann Groucher and Hildur Queen.

Best bet—Miss Warning.

Scotchwood Is Purchased By Mrs. Kees

Perry's 4-Year-Old Held Warrenton Title Last Year

Special Dispatch to The Post

Richmond, Va., June 2.—Biggest news out of the Virginia hunt country in many months is the sale of Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's brilliant 4-year-old, Scotchwood, to Dr. and Mrs. Walter T. Kees, of New York.

Scotchwood, winner of the Virginia 3-year-old championship last year at Warrenton, went to the Kees' stable for what is reportedly the largest price paid for a hunter recently in the East. The sale was made at the Devon (Pa.), show last week, where the big chestnut annexed several ribbons.

The Kees' string is well-known to local horse show fans, for their famed Lew Dunbar won the Reserve jumper championship at the recent Washington show.

Another important sale from Mr. and Mrs. Perry's Cobham (Va.) stable was the departure of Demopolis for S. W. Kaufmann's Indianapolis, (Ind.) barn. Demopolis, a 5-year-old son of Ormintpyrex, won the conformation hunters' championship at Washington over some of the best horses in the country.

Although the absence of Scotchwood and Demopolis leaves a noticeable gap in the Perrys' collection of horses, will be well filled by Huntley Glen, good bay mare which they purchased at Devon from Nancy Marie Shaw, of Chester Springs, Pa. Huntley Glen jumped 6 feet in the skyscraper event at Washington and defeated Lew Dunbar for the jumper tri-color. Mrs. Perry will make her initial appearance on the mare at next week's Norfolk show.

Klein Victim Of 4-3 Upset In City League

Frank Small Motor Nine Wins Behind Hurling of Stant

The most stunning upset of National City League play to date was registered yesterday by Frank Small Motor nine when it stopped a late rally of Klein Tavern, the league leader and defending champ, to win by a 4-3 margin. The Motormen were outhit, 13-10, but "Lefty" Stant tightened down nicely in the clutches. He also contributed three singles to the winning cause.

Fielding star of the day was Second Baseman Bud Artis, who combined with Desimone and Cohill for a double play and snapped a Klein threat in the fifth when he snagged Shipp's line drive, stepped on second to retire Nau and threw Clomel out at first for a triple play.

Three runs in the fourth completed Small's scoring after each team had tallied once in the first inning. Bob Elliot was credited with all of them, his double emptying the packed bases. The loss was doubly bitter to Klein in that it was suffered as the Tavernmen christened their new diamond on the District line and Bladensburg road.

Junior section hostilities, the first of the season, saw Naiman Photo nine steal the spotlight with a 13-5 triumph over Police Boys Club No. 4. Dick Price started shakily but wound up with a five-hit performance during which he had struck out 15.

Another junior clash was called after nine innings with Kneesi Cubs and Cardinal A. C. in a 3-3 deadlock. Uline Ice turned in an 8-4 decision over Woodridge A. C.

Stagg Defends College Spring Grid Practice

By the Associated Press

Boise, Idaho, June 2.—Amos Alonzo Stagg, dean of American football coaches, "can't see where any school could possibly benefit" from abolishing spring football training.

"There's a chance to develop players in the spring that a coach doesn't have in the fall," Stagg told newspaper reporters. "Each spring some boys turn out that have never played football. Some of them are good prospects.

"Some of the larger schools could probably get along, but I don't believe there's a smaller school that could."

Cooley Post Nine Wins First Half

First half honors in the American Legion Junior Baseball League went to Cooley-McCullough Post yesterday when it swamped National Cathedral, 12 to 2. Hines struck out 13 and allowed only two hits as his club won its sixth straight.

Though able to gather only four hits, Police Post turned in a 9-to-6 victory over Costello in another league game. Nine bases on balls by O'Connell, of Costello, gave Police its margin. Fort Stevens also scored, winning by 10 to 5, over Potomac Post.

Skinker Wins School Golf Title

Had Driver Trouble

Skinker had trouble controlling his driver on the first nine. He lost the first hole when he was in the rough all the way. Vass had the second hole apparently locked up, but his putt for a win went well past the hole and he was stymied coming back. He finally chipped over Skinker's ball for a good halve. The 18-year-old champion evened the match on the third, but Vass' perfect birdie on the fifth put Skinker one down again.

Vass stymied himself for the second time on the seventh hole and the match was even, Skinker winning the hole with a bogey five. The latter gave his followers a thrill on the ninth by arching an iron shot that settled only inches short of a hole in one, and he was one up at the turn.

Took 10 and 11

It looked like Skinker's fourth straight one-sided victory as he won 10 and 11 on the back nine in pars, and then three-putted the twelfth to keep from going four up. Vass regained his touch at this point and cut one hole off the lead by dropping a 25-footer on the short fourteenth for a par. He lost it right back by three-putting the fifteenth, won the sixteenth when Skinker was wild around the green to be two down and two to play, and then barely missed a birdie on the seventeenth. Skinker putted close for his par to protect his two-hole lead and the match was over, 2 and 1.

An outstanding pretournament favorite, Skinker, Columbia Club's hope for National Amateur laurels, was a total of 20 up on his four opponents. The match was also Vass' last in scholastic competition as the 18-year-old senior graduates this month.

Solution to Saturday's Puzzle

with Slocum

Just in case you hadn't noticed, via such proletarian things as thermometers, it is nice to serve official notice that summer is here. Yes indeed, summer is amongst us, and with it the summer theater.

The summer theater means just one thing to WJSV-uns. It means we must prepare for a few months of Reginald Ailen and his histrionic career, which he picks up in this season of the year by prancing through an epic or two out at the Crossroads Theater.

Last year Reginald played in a leading role and the gentlemen of the local press spoke in resounding phrases of his talents. He is back in rehearsal again, this time for a job entitled "A woman's a Fool," which has a two-week run scheduled to start July 1.

Before Reginald crawled gingerly behind the protection of AFRA and other unts which save announcers from work and/or starvation, he was an actor. To quote him verbatim on the subject, "a ham." He played in a series of expensively but well laid eggs on Broadway before taking his dulcet tones to the wireless. Since then he has done a little better than all right for himself, but every so often some heartless producer waves a little grease paint and a 45 side part in his general direction, and he comes to point like a bird dog.

As a matter of fact, the WJSV announcing staff is rich with talent. Before John Charles Daly started his radio career he was making life pretty miserable for Boston's critics. The Messrs. Hugh Conover and Lee Vickers have upon occasion sung to large and appreciative audiences. Joe King has done a bit of offstage commentating for a local show and, of course, the last member of the staff, Gunnar Back, once taught at the University of Wisconsin, and if Prof. Back didn't do a bit of striding and emoting a la Smithfield he was certainly one of the few non-Equity pro pundits in the land.

"Orphans in Love"

By Marion White

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since both were children. They take refuge from a storm in the deserted old Tucker mansion and note the resemblance of Peter to Jonathan Tucker. John Abbott and his wife, who manage the Tucker estate, fear their deception 25 years ago when they abandoned the only heir at the orphanage, will be discovered. Abbott offers Peter a job in his firm. Ellen is hurt when Peter says Millicent Abbott is beautiful, and Mother Rosa at the orphanage helps by sending Ellen to Rosalind, a designer who hires her as a model. The Abbotts decide Peter and Millicent would be a good match. Ellen models a bridal gown at Rosalind's fall show, which Roger Maillard attends with his sister. The handsome millionaire sportsman falls in love with Ellen but she declines his invitations. Ellen gets her chance at dressmaking when a maid spills ink on a bridal gown the night before the Van Dorne wedding. Roger Maillard stands guard while Ellen works. She finishes the substitute dress at 3 a. m. The dress is accepted and Rosalind doubles Ellen's salary, promoting her to designer.

Chapter 28

THE HOLIDAYS slipped by quickly. Thanksgiving was a cold, bleak day, and Ellen went to Riverview alone.

For years, ever since they had gone out into the world, Ellen and Peter had returned to St. Peter's for Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner, just as young people all over return to childhood homes to reweave old memories and dreams.

This year he had planned to go as usual. The week before he had phoned Ellen to arrange the time and meeting place. "It will give us a chance to walk over to the Tucker house, too," he had added hopefully. "Now that I'm supposed to manage the place, I see it less than ever."

But Wednesday, late in the evening, he called it off.

"It isn't my fault, Ellen. Explain that to Mother Rosa and Father Joseph, will you? I've never missed a Thanksgiving dinner with them yet. But there's an important case coming to trial and Mr. Abbott wants to discuss it with me tomorrow. I'll have dinner with them."

Superficial Excuse

The excuse was superficial, but Ellen did not blame Peter. His voice was strained, and a little uncertain, as if he realized that he was being pressed against his will, but didn't know what to do about it.

What disturbed her was Mr. Abbott's patronage. Peter was still in law school; it would be another two years almost before he could be admitted to the bar.

Certainly an attorney of John Abbott's prestige would have nothing to discuss with one so young and inexperienced.

Ellen understood now, as Peter would never be able to, that it was Millicent who forced these situations.

Millicent, who had a sort of romantic attachment for Peter, and could have him ordered about to please her. Peter, you must come to the game at Cambridge next Saturday. I'll have Father arrange it.

Or this time: Father I want Peter here for Thanksgiving. You must arrange it.

Christmas, however, was another day, a day of his own making.

"I'll be around early in the morning, Ellen," he had assured her a week before. "We'll go to church together, and then unwrap our presents right under Miss Evans' nose."

New Job

For Ellen, despite the importance of her new job and her increase in salary, was still living at the residence club. But she was a specially privileged guest now, and Miss Evans had offered her a private little sitting room on the first floor where she might entertain a young man occasionally.

"Rules are rules," she had remarked when making this concession, "but of course, Miss Carlan, we don't expect you to embarrass a gentleman like Mr. Maillard by having everybody in the large living room stare at him."

That was how it was. Roger was a frequent visitor now; he called to take Ellen to dinner and the theater, to football games and Sunday concerts, as often, as she would accept the invitations. And his visits were, for some reason, a sort of personal triumph for Miss Evans, a tribute to the dignity of her establishment.

On Christmas eve, he had sent her the most beautiful poinsettia plant she had ever seen. "In appreciation of your charming hospatility," the card read. As she read it her usually prim voice choked with the intensity of her delight.

"I declare, he is the most thoughtful man, Miss Carlan," she exclaimed enthusiastically. "A perfect gentleman, if ever there was one. I always say good breeding shows. You can always tell. Now take Mr. Storm: I did like him, Miss Carlan. I still do. Don't misunderstand me. But—well, he isn't Mr. Maillard."

Ellen bit her lip to keep back the sharp retort which Miss Evans' well-meant sermon had invoked. Peter was Peter, as well bred and fine as any man living.

Anybody who wasn't blinded by the name of Maillard and the vision of castles and securities would know that. For the moment, she almost hated Roger, and she didn't want to because he was everything Miss Evans had said, and more too.

There was the Christmas gift, for example. She'd been afraid that, being who he was, he might have offered some glorious bracelet, swimming with diamonds. Or a mink wrap. Appropriate gifts for an ambitious cloak model.

He had done nothing at all like that. He'd brought her a bag, a beautiful hand-tooled leather bag, with gleaming copper corners and hand-wrought initials.

I knew you'd like it," he said boyishly. "My old foreman out on the ranch made it—and he's mighty proud of his work. It's our own leather, and copper from our next-door neighbor's mine, practically. And Joe did it especially for you, initials and all."

Loved Gift

She loved it, because it was a gift from Roger Maillard, the farmer, and not a condescension from Roger Maillard, the prince.

But that was yesterday: Christmas Eve and a very pleasant day, but a day of no importance. This was Christmas, a day of eternal significance, and a day to spend with Peter.

They took a taxi all the way to Riverview, because laden down with gifts as they were, the bus was out of the question.

"I'm still hoping to have a car of my own," Peter remarked a little wearily. "But I don't know when it will be. Seems that I have less money now, on $50 a week than I used to have on $30.

Ellen didn't answer. She had no doubt that Millicent Abbott was an expensive person to entertain.

No Place

"What are in all the packages?" she asked him, to change the trend of their thoughts. There was no place in this day for Millicent Abbott.

He glanced down at the miscellaneous assortment stacked about his feet. "Same old things. Candy for the kids. Books for Father Joseph."

He pointed out different boxes identifying each one for her benefit. "A small radio for his room. He can sit up nights and listen to short-wave calls."

His voice became eager: "And here's something—one of those amateur radio sets. You know, for hams. The kids can rig it up in the workshop."

Ellen Is Grateful

He spoke of this latter gift rather proudly, and Ellen's heart overflowed with gratitude. He hadn't spent everything on his new friends and forgotten the family at St. Peter's. He hadn't changed. The past few months had made no real difference. He was the same Peter she had always loved.

"What did you bring?" His excitement was boyish and free.

"Same old things, too. Candy and cakes. A cashmere shawl for Mother Rosa.

"Dolls for the girls, and a whole bag of leftover silks and velvets from Rosalind's, eh? How's the new job going?"

"Fine. I'm studying design now. And I got a raise." She did not tell him how much lest the knowledge might dim the glory of his own position.

Taft Makes Preparedness Speech Here

Sees Colored Race As Invaluable Aid In Armament Drive

Preparedness, and the integration of the Negro into a program of national defense, were discussed by Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, Republican candidate for the Presidential nomination, yesterday at the annual men's day service at Lincoln Temple Congregational Church.

Introduced by Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman from Mississippi, Senator Taft called on his hearers to face the fact that this Nation is not prepared.

There is, he said, no definite defense plan for Europe, England, the continental United States, the Caribbean and the northern coast of South America in addition, or all the Americas.

"Someone should, first of all," he said, "make a definite plan of what we are going to defend. The great question, indeed, is not what is the plan, but who is to make up that plan. An advisory board has been set up, but who are they going to advise? That is the important question.

"The Negro American is just as interested in defense as anyone else," he continued. "He should be an integral part of the increases in the Army and Navy, and in the mobilization of industries.

"In this respect, while Republicans can serve a great purpose in criticizing the plan until it is perfected, it is more imortant that the Negro should be consulted than that the Republican Party should be consulted," he said.

"In development of our air force, the Negro is well suited to be employed in proportion to his percentage of the population. Our parties, disregarding this, take the Negro too much for granted. They have not taken into account the necessity for proportionate representation of the Negro in our Government.

"Recently elected Republican Governors, a score of them, however, have learned that lesson. Proportionate representation of the Negro in employment should not only be found in the war industries, but in all other industries also. This is a matter which cannot be brought about by legislation," Senator Taft said, "but only by development of sentiment."

"At the same time, when layoffs are necessary, there should be a proportionate layoff, rather than a total layoff of colored workers, who will be rehired only after all others have been given jobs."

With reference to development of a totalitarian government here, and the relinquishment of its constitutional powers by the Congress, Senator Taft said:

"Development of a totalitarian power would, in nowise be good for the Negro, who constitutes a minority group. We should not, under any circumstances, give unlimited powers to any one man. There is no reason for Congress giving up its powers to anyone. There is no reason why Congress should not stay here and do its work—for which its members are paid.

"Let us determine what powers are necessary to be had. Then, let Congress go ahead and exercise those powers. There can be no need for any loose powers hanging around in the hands of any one man.

"The Negro is interested in the Constitution of the United States, rather than in the development of a totalitarian state. He is interested in carrying out the spirit and letter of the Constitution, in the light of the existing emergency, so that men in our public life may remain servants, rather than masters, of the people."

Judge Green to Quit Bench In Court of Claims Next Fall

Jurist Was Appointed By Coolidge After Tax Policy Clashes

Judge William Raymond Green, reported to have been "kicked upstairs" from the House Ways and Means Committee chairmanship when President Coolidge named him to the United States Court of Claims in 1928, will retire from the bench at the end of the court's fall term next October.

Confirming reports of his impending retirement last night, Judge Green recalled that because of his frequent disagreement with tax policies of the late Andrew Mellon, then Secretary of the Treasury, Coolidge's offer of a place on the bench was widely interpreted as a move to get him out of the Ways and Means chair.

A champion of higher taxes for the rich and lower taxes for others, Judge Green, a Republican, was first chairman of the Joint Committee on Taxation, which he headed from its foundation in 1926 until his resignation from the House. He had served 17 years continuously as a Representative from Iowa.

As chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, he authored the daddy of the soldier's bonus bills in 1924, legislation which gave insurance to veterans according to the time they served abroad, and many another important act. Among them was the Alien Property Act of 1920, which provided for settlement of the claims of aliens whose property had been seized at the height of World War hysteria.

In one of his clashes with Mellon and Coolidge, Judge Green fought reduction of the Federal tax on estates. In another, he was mainly responsible for the defeat of the so-called Mellon bill.

Judge Green was born 83 years ago in Colchester, Conn., was graduated from Oberlin College, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar in Illinois in 1882. Shortly afterward he began practicing law in Iowa. In 1894 he was elected an Iowa district judge, serving until his resignation to represent his district in Congress.

He told The Post he was retiring because of his health, but at the request of Chief Justice Hughes had agreed to remain on the bench until the fall term ends, in order to gather up loose ends.

Under the Judicial Retirement Act, he may be recalled for service from time to time.
